New Racial Rioting Erupts In Rochester

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP) — New racial rioting broke out Saturday night on Rochester's West Side, a mile and a half from Friday night's riots. About 100 state troopers were rushed to the scene. Police used tear gas in an effort to quell the mob. One policeman was reported to have fired into the air.

The new violence broke out despite a strict 8 p.m. curfew clamped down in an effort to prevent renewal of the rioting that broke out Friday night and continued into Saturday, leaving more than 90 persons injured, stores looted and smashed and more than 100 persons in jail on the felony charge of rioting.

The scene of the new outbreak was the Bronson-Jefferson-Cady streets section, on the city's Southwest Side. Negroes recently have been moving into the residential area that formerly was a white neighborhood.

Some looting was reported in this section Friday night, although the main violence then was on Joseph Avenue, a Negro section near the downtown business section of this city of 300,000.

As the curfew hour neared Saturday night, city and state police moved quietly along Joseph Avenue clearing it of pedestrians. The section previously had been closed to automobile traffic.

But in the other trouble section, hundreds of Negroes still were on the street an hour after the curfew took effect.

The state troopers were rushed across town on city buses. They were greeted by a shower of bricks from the Negroes.

The trouble centered at the corner of Jefferson and Bartlett streets, a neighborhood of neat, well-kept homes with lawns and flowers that make it a far better neighborhood than Joseph Avenue.

Hundreds of Negroes, some holding beer cans, hooted and jeered at the troopers as they hurried off the buses, lined up in military fashion and double-timed down the street.

The jagged, red bricks were hurled from second-story porches and rooftops.

Burglar alarms, set off as store windows were smashed, jangled in the dark.

Rochester city patrol cars cruised the area, six of them bumper to bumper at one point. One Negro man rushed up to a state police sergeant screaming: "You're only making it worse by bringing all these armed men in here. You're the ones who are causing the riot."

Rubbish littered the streets in many places, dumped there by angry demonstrators.

One man screamed: "Where's Rockefeller? Bring Rockefeller and let him see what you're doing," in a reference to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller who earlier Saturday vowed that such rioting as in Rochester and in New York City earlier in the week "will be met by the full force of the law."

Negroes have blamed the outbreaks on reputed police brutality—the same complaint that was made during the rioting in Harlem.

As the sultry summer afternoon turned to evening, City Manager Porter W. Homer, who earlier had declared a state of emergency, ordered all residents off the streets from 8 p.m. to 7 a.m. He urged them not to panic.

Homer said persons violating the curfew would be subject to arrest although those moving about for emergency reasons would be allowed to pass.

He said the curfew would be in effect every night until the state of emergency was terminated.

Gun shops were ordered closed. So were most motion picture theaters in downtown Rochester. Bars and liquor stores were directed to close at 5 p.m.

Homer said "I plead with the citizens not to panic."

He said city officials were "prepared for anything and everything tonight."

Deputy Police Chief Clarence DePrez estimated that more than 400 persons—many hurrying bottles, cans and stones—took part in the riot at its various stages. DePrez said nearly all the rioters were Negroes.

Some whites joined in the fray and also in the looting of stores. (Continued On Page 13)

Viet Cong Strikes Hard, Often, Inflicts Heavy Casualties

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Never in the history of the war in South Viet Nam have the Communist Viet Cong struck so hard and so often as in the past week. The surprise here Saturday is that Red leaders have ordered ambushes of everything that moves.

"We can always move troops and material by air," a high U.S. officer said. "But part of the idea of winning this war is opening up and controlling overland communications channels—roads, canals and so on."

"We have to keep moving on land, and I'm afraid this blood-letting will continue until the Vietnamese forces begin to do more about keeping security guards out when they move and taking better precautions against ambushes."

Over the past 48-hour period the Communists, using the same attack pattern, have inflicted more than 160 casualties upon government troops in three ambushes. One of the casualties was an American military adviser who became the 15th U.S. combat fatality since December 1961.

The Viet Cong conceal themselves in the dense Vietnamese foliage and their pattern is to knock out the lead and last vehicles in a convoy with recoilless cannons. This closes escape routes.

Then the Reds swarm out of the foliage and engage the government troops in hand-to-hand combat. This method virtually rules out government air attacks.

Often convoys are led into ambush. The Viet Cong will attack a remote outpost. A government unit is rushed to its rescue. Along the way, Viet Cong forces lie in wait for the convoy.

He told a reporter some person or persons broke into the Haben Funeral Home, removed the body from its casket, took

RACIAL TROUBLE AT-A-GLANCE

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Riot-scattered city sealed under night curfew after hundreds of Negroes battle policemen and firemen. State of emergency declared by city manager. Nearly 1,000 police officers on duty. National Guard alerted. Injuries mount to more than 80; property damage and looting widespread.

ALBANY, N.Y. — Gov. Rockefeller warns that rioting and looting "will be met by the full force of the law," both in Rochester and New York City.

NEW YORK — Heavy detail of helmeted police break up attempted anti-police march in Harlem, now under ban on marching. Communist leader of group arrested. State unit of NAACP calls on Rockefeller to set up biracial meeting to cope with crises.

OMAHA, Neb. — On basis of civil rights issue, Negro leader Philip Randolph announces preference for President Johnson over Sen. Barry Goldwater. He says Goldwater is against civil rights.

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — "It's an awful thing to think you won't live until tomorrow."

So spoke Philip Karakooch, 21, one of four Connecticut men rescued after nine days at sea on a rubber life raft designed for two.

Karakooch, a machinist from Chesire, said he felt it was all over when on the ninth day after their yacht sank during a trip to Bermuda they were down to a pint of water.

"But Leo kept us from losing our heads," he said of Leo Pogorzelski, 48, a father of five children.

"Leo was a stabilizing influence. He rationed the water and led us in daily prayer."

Karakooch, Pogorzelski, Ralph G. Stevens, 32, and Julius Kasimer, 34, were spotted by a plane Thursday. The British freighter Thurday, en route here from Malta, picked them up.

Pogorzelski, who with Stevens hails from Waterbury, told of writing his last will on the side of the raft. Karakooch said he wrote several last messages on a can that would float.

The four left Saybrook, Conn., for Bermuda July 11 on Stevens' 36-foot motor sailer, the Gooney Bird. Pogorzelski said he was at the helm on the night of July 13 when the yacht struck something and started shipping water.

"I don't know what we hit," he said. "It sounded like something wooden. Although there was a bright moon, I couldn't see anything."

Kasimer, of New Haven, said he was asleep "but the impact woke me up."

The men at first didn't think much of the leak.

But by the next day, Stevens said, they noticed the bilge pumps running constantly.

"The boat started swinging from side to side rather badly Tuesday, and by Wednesday noon it was so bad we had to take to the raft. We tried to tie the raft to the boat, but in the confusion it slipped away."

The men said the Gooney Bird drifted away. None of them actually saw it sink.

Believe Soviet Shot To Venus Missed Its Mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet spacecraft designed to hit Venus or to come close enough to gather scientific data on the planet apparently missed its mark earlier this week, sources said Saturday.

The craft was called Zond 1, which the Russians identified only as a small weather-testing laboratory launched April 2 from a satellite orbiting the earth.

Because of the timing of the shot, Western scientists immediately guessed that it was an attempt to land instruments on Venus or to approach closer than the 21,468-mile distance at which the U. S. Mariner II passed the planet Dec. 14, 1962.

American tracking stations previously had noted similar Soviet shots on Feb. 26 and March 4 and learned that both went astray.

Information gathered by U.S. space teams indicated that the Russians were able to correct the course of Zond 1 several times.

An official said the Soviet shot was expected to reach the area of Venus as early as July 18 or as late as July 25.

It is believed that had the flight been successful, the Russians for reasons of world prestige would have announced the results quickly. They have said nothing about it.

The Russians are believed now to have failed in more than a dozen consecutive attempts to send probes to the moon or to the planets.

OAS Votes For Sanctions Against Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign ministers of the American republics, in their first test vote on a resolution to impose diplomatic and trade sanctions on Communist Cuba, voted 15-3 Saturday night in favor of the measures against the Fidel Castro regime.

The ministers called a plenary session of the conference to vote formally on the proposal.

The 15 votes were two more than the 13 necessary for adoption. An official of the Organization of American States said Bolivia abstained on the committee vote, with Chile, Mexico and Uruguay voting no.

Conference resolution No. 12—the one approved by the general committee late Saturday, also contains a warning to the Castro regime that future aggression against an American republic, such as that against Venezuela last year, could bring armed attack by any one of the American nations.

The preamble of the resolution—declaring that Cuba's aggressions against Venezuela "conflict with the principles and aims of the inter-American system"—was approved 18-1, with Mexico the only dissenter.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk spoke out Saturday in favor of the sanctions and condemnation of the Castro regime and told a closed-door meeting that, "Failure to act now might create a situation of the highest possible danger."

Uruguay and Bolivia, which accompanied Mexico and Chile in opposing sanctions, are expected to abide by them.

The sanctions are to be mandatory, but no time limit is provided in putting them into effect.

Latin-American delegates opposing the Castro regime said they are pleased that final act of the conference is to be signed Sunday. July 26 is observed by Cuban Communists as a day of festivity marking the start of the Castro revolution in Cuba.

Hoffa Trial Jurors Recess Until Today

CHICAGO (AP)—The jury deliberating the $20-million mail fraud and conspiracy case against Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa and six co-defendants quit for the day at 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

Deliberations will resume at 9:30 a.m. Sunday. The jury of eight men and four women was taken to hotel accommodations at the Great Lakes Naval Base, 30 miles north of Chicago. The jury has been kept under guard since the trial began.

The jury deliberated 4½ hours Friday night, then resumed at 9:10 a.m. Saturday.

Hoffa, 51, paced the courtroom floor frequently. His was a familiar role. He has been involved in federal cases five times in the last seven years.

He was convicted March 4 in Chattanooga, Tenn., of attempting to bribe a jury. He was sentenced to eight years in prison. He is appealing.

Defense attorneys told newsmen the dismissal of one juror Friday was contrary to the rules. The juror, Rayford Lee, 62, was sent home because his mother had suffered a broken hip in a fall. Some attorneys said that, under the rules, a juror must be unable to deliberate before he can be released.

An alternate, Lawrence Miller, replaced Lee. Both are members of labor unions. In all, eight of the 12 jurors belong to various unions.

The jurors face the prospect of delivering 147 verdicts. Each defendant is charged with 20 counts of wire and mail fraud and one of conspiracy.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Investigations subcommittee will launch Tuesday a far-ranging probe of the international narcotics racket and its operation in the United States and Canada. Chairman John L. McClellan, D-Ark., asked federal Narcotics Commissioner Henry L. Giordano to lead off the testimony tracing the flow of illicit drugs from opium poppy fields in the Near East and Far East to Western Hemisphere mobsters.

Much of the testimony is to center on the big time narcotics traffic in New York City, Chicago, San Francisco and other cities across the United States, and in Quebec, Montreal and Ottawa, Canada.

Subcommittee sources said evidence compiled by their own investigators and undercover agents for the Narcotics Bureau also will show inner workings of narcotics rings operating in Detroit, Philadelphia, Newark, N. J., San Antonio, Tex., and San Diego, Calif., and the nation's capital.

Over 1000 delegates and alternates met in convention Sat. at the Elks Club in Springfield for the historic occasion, being the first time in Illinois history that Appellate judges have been so nominated. This is by virtue of the recent adoption by the people of the state of the new Judicial Article to the Illinois constitution.

Morgan County delegates were: William P. Zachary, Orville Foreman, Charles J. Ryan, John Bellatti, Thomas C. Rose, Albert W. Hall, Hugh Green, William L. Fay, Ivan Petefish, Clarence Rimbey, Ralph Lomelino, Clifford Fricke, Albert Hoagland, William Winchester, Marion Schell, Stanley Fernandes and Theodore Rammelkamp.

Two of the Morgan County delegates addressed the convention in nominating speeches for two of the three winning candidates. Orville Foreman spoke in behalf of Albert Saikley and State's Attorney Charles J. Ryan, chairman of the Morgan County delegation, addressed the convention in seconding the nomination of Stanley Thomas.

Smith, 61, was appointed circuit judge in March 1957 and won election to a full term the following June. He was appointed to the 4th District Appellate Court last January.

Plane Crashes Into House, Kills Pilot, 2 Women

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — A Navy jet attack plane crashed into a house Saturday killing its pilot and two women who were inside the house.

A third woman was burned critically.

Police identified the dead women as two sisters, Miss I. V. Cassidy, 61, and Miss Ostella Cassidy, 58. The burned woman, who was visiting the house at the time of the crash, is Miss Idell Pickens, 58.

The pilot was not identified pending notification of his next of kin.

A Navy spokesman said the single-seat plane, a Marine F1E Fury jet, was making its final landing approach to the naval air station when the crash occurred about one mile from the west end of the runway.

Both the plane and the house were demolished.

The pilot was a member of Marine Reserve Fighter Squadron 351, based at the Atlanta Naval Air Station, the spokesman said.

Police Break Up Intended Parade

NEW YORK (AP)—Police broke up an intended antipolice parade in strife-torn Harlem Saturday, dispersed the intended marchers and arrested their Communist ringleader.

The leader, William Epton, a Negro and avowed Communist, was bundled into a police car shortly after he arrived at the starting point at Lenox Ave. and 116th Street.

He protested that his followers only intended a peaceful walk but a Negro policeman told him: "You are under arrest."

Instead of the thousands of paraders that Epton had predicted only about 300 marchers and spectators were on hand at the scheduled 4 p.m. starting time.

A heavy detail of helmeted police waded into them, shoving them from the intersection and shouting to them to go home.

The parade was intended to stress Negro charges of police brutality—a recurring complaint since rioting broke out in Harlem a week ago. The disorders here spread to Brooklyn.

The disorders were sparked by the fatal shooting of a 15-year-old Negro boy by a white policeman who said the boy was coming at him with a knife.

Police who broke up the parade also arrested Conrad J. Lynn, Epton's attorney.

"We are under arrest—we are under arrest!" Epton shouted as they were taken away. Both were charged with disorderly conduct on the ground they had caused a crowd to collect.

Half an hour after the arrests, the intersection was virtually back to normal except for a number of onlookers strolling the sidewalks and peering from (Continued On Page 13)

Goldwater, Aides Meet Monday To Start Organizing

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater and the men who will be top hands in the Republican's bid for the presidency sit down Monday to go over organizational plans.

On hand will be Dean Burch, the young new chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Denison Kitchell, the Arizona senator's campaign director, as well as staff aides.

One of the major tasks to be decided is the filling of a dozen top staff spots within the National Committee.

"This is where you take a look at what you've done and start giving it together," an aide to Goldwater said of the campaign-talk gathering.

More than likely, the first look also will be given to the numerous requests from state Republican chairmen and others who want Goldwater for campaign appearances.

The GOP nominee continued working today at his apartment, as he has since returning from the nominating convention at San Francisco.

It was assumed the staff appointments to be made probably will come before Goldwater leaves Thursday for a week of rest in California.

He is scheduled to fly to Bohemian Grove, north of San Francisco Thursday, then Saturday go to Newport Beach, Calif., to join Mrs. Goldwater. They have vacationed there for several years.

By the time Goldwater returns to Washington around Aug. 6, he will have less than two weeks before kicking off his campaign.

The formal kickoff for the nominee is to come at Prescott, Ariz., sometime the week of Aug. 16-22, although the exact date is still to be nailed down. This will be about a week before the Democrats hold their national convention in Atlantic City, N. J.

"Lucky Prescott," is where Goldwater has kicked off each of his successful political campaigns.

A larger volunteer group will be installing gates and giving the grounds a final grooming before fair time starting next week.

They Found His Body Next Day

Old Shepherd Like Bible Picture

By DAVID LANCASHIRE
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—The scene seemed straight from the Bible—a gnarled old man with a leather pouch on his back, grazing his sheep on a hillside in the sun. They found his body next day, crumpled in the bottom of a well, with two bullet holes in his forehead. Shepherds in Cyprus watch their flocks in fear, and the once peaceful profession has become one of the most dangerous jobs on the troubled island. Twenty-one shepherds have been wounded or killed since near-civil war erupted between Greek and Turkish Cypriots. Dozens more have been fired at. At least 10 have vanished or been kidnapped. "To find grazing for the sheep and goats, we have to go a long way from the villages, and there is no one out there to protect us," explained Hassan Hussein, a 30-year-old shepherd from the Turkish village of Hamit Mandres. "I never know when I go out in the morning if I will ever get home again." "Forty-five days ago I was with my sheep over there," he said, pointing beyond the barren, dust-colored hills where nothing grows. "I heard shouts and stood up and there were four Greeks running toward me. They fired their guns and I ran—I ran so fast I left my boots behind. I hid in a dry riverbed." Every year when the sun-seared fields dry up, the island's shepherds take their flocks to the rich green foothills of the mountains. This year the move means crossing enemy territory, for Greeks and Turks alike, and many shepherds fear their animals will die on the sparse lowland grazing. "I am 77 years old and I have been a shepherd all my life, and this is the first year I can remember when I couldn't take the sheep to the hills," said Panayis Yanni, a hulking Greek villager from Mia Milea. "I am not afraid, but my wife is, and she doesn't want me to go to the fields at all."

THE MAN FROM THE WEST (4)

As his father had before him, Barry Goldwater met his future wife in the family department store in Phoenix. He married the former Margaret Johnson on Sept. 22, 1934. They were to have four children—Joanne, Barry, Michael and Margaret.

Barry became president of Goldwater's, Inc., in 1937. That year he was the recipient of a U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce award.

By Don Oakley and John Lane

Always an outdoorsman, Goldwater combined this interest with two others—Arizona history and Indian lore—in a spectacular way. In July 1940, with five other men and three women in three boats, he set off on a 700-mile-long trip down the Green and Colorado Rivers to Hoover Dam and became one of the first white men to negotiate the treacherous rapids of the Grand Canyon. He told about it in a book—"Journey Down the River of Canyons"—and in other writings. A year and a half later the nation was at war and he found himself involved in even more dangerous activities.

LBJ To Dedicate Communications Center Aug. 5

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—The first section of a $15-million communications center, heralded as "the world's largest and most advanced," will be dedicated here Aug. 5 by President Johnson.

The President also will be awarded an honorary degree of doctor of laws at a new five-story School of Journalism building on the Syracuse University campus.

The building, a precast concrete structure of cruciform design, is the first of a three-building communications complex to be created on an eight-acre site. The entire $15-million cost will be paid by Samuel I. Newhouse, publisher-broadcaster, personally and through the Newhouse Foundation.

About 1,000 students are expected to occupy the journalism building, two stories of which are underground, this year. The complete complex, to be known as the Newhouse Communications Center, is scheduled for completion in 1968.

Newhouse, 68, owns 19 newspapers, plus radio and television stations and magazines in various parts of the country. His holdings include two papers and a radio and television station in Syracuse.

Enrollment at Syracuse University, which totals about 13,000, is expected to increase through creation of the communications center. The university's School of Journalism, founded in 1934, has a current enrollment of about 130 students.

BEGINS SERVING PRISON SENTENCE

JERSEYVILLE — John L. Kelley, 18-year-old youth of the Madison county locality, was taken from the Jersey County jail to the Illinois State Farm at Vandalia Wednesday by Chief Deputy Sheriff Hargiss Maholland.

Kelley entered a plea of guilty Monday to an indictment charging him with participation in the March burglary of a dwelling on the John Wittman farm premises in Piasa Township.

INJURED AT WORK

BEARDSTOWN — Irwin Pilger, who operates the filling station at 4th and Monroe street, suffered back and leg injuries when he was knocked to the driveway as a car on which he had been working started moving on a slight slope. One wheel of the car passed over Pilger's leg. He did not suffer a fracture and was able to be on duty Friday.

Seek To Improve Lot Of Future Researchers

BEARDSTOWN — Researchers including reporters will have an easier time of it a century hence when they begin delving into the records of the area for factual or background material, as a result of the activities of the Cass County Historical Society's determination to collect and preserve historic data.

Metal storage cabinets in which historic documents will be stored in the libraries of Virginia and Beardstown are to be purchased by the society. The group met at the Petefish Skiles bank in Virginia and voted on this new project, deciding also to establish a central filing system into which many documents and reports already obtained will be preserved and made readily accessible to all interested.

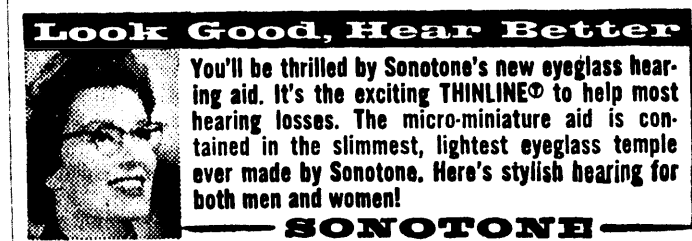

Tin-types, old Bibles, data about the Beard family and other old settlers already have been readied for the library files. Historians Booth

Also decided at the Virginia meeting was the plan to sponsor a booth in the coming Cass County Fair to be held in Virginia, at which all local towns may exhibit historical material. One of the interesting exhibits at the fair will be an early account by the historian Perrin of the first fair ever held in Cass County.

Mrs. Howard Brarman will be in charge of the Beardstown exhibit and Eileen Brockhouse of Virginia and Clara Scott of Chandelville have been named to take charge of other exhibits.

J.F.A. image of youthful vigor in politics—to prove that politics is an honorable profession for forward thinking young people” says Crenna.

He plays the majority leader of an assembly in a mythical state.

There's a good reason. “If we tie ourselves up with Washington, or a real state,” says Crenna, “then our scripts are limited in scope. This way, we can hit hard—and make no one mad, least of all sensitive sponsors who sell their products in every state and Washington.”

Crenna, in person an Ivy League type, used to play Luke on “The Real McCoys.” Before that, he was the perennial high school sophomore on the “Our Miss Brooks” show.

Owner of the show is Bing Crosby. CBS-TV is so hot on the show that it is placing it in the 10 p.m., EST, slot Monday nights.

That doesn't make Crosby too happy because the main competition is “Ben Casey” on ABC-TV. Crosby owns that one too.

As Bob Hope told Crenna: “Crosby doesn't pay income taxes. He just calls up the government every year and asks it how much it needs to make up the deficit.”

Crenna's mythical state has a metropolitan city, mining, varied industry and agriculture.

“It's practically a mythical country,” he says.

Scripts take an offbeat slant toward current issue. One involving civil rights goes after a playboy Negro representative who cries race every time he runs afoul.

“Slattery, that's me,” says Crenna, “straightens him out by showing that he is doing the cause of his people harm—and I tell him straight from the hip. No words spared.”

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—“Slattery's People,” a new political series, hits television screens next fall.

And, no mistake about it, it's in the JFK image.

Richard Crenna, the star, even bears a slight resemblance in height and coloring to the late President John F. Kennedy.

Hospital-in-the-round, a circular, 30-40 bed hospital, is formed mainly of aluminum "sandwich" panels.

Hospital-in-the-Round Gets a 'Fair' Trial

Contour-conforming operating table helps minimize post-operative discomfort, through relief of strain.

Talents of medicine, science and industry are blended in the hospital-in-the-round, 100 feet in diameter, now functioning at the New York World's Fair. Known as the "Automedic Hospital," a term derived from atomic-age medicine—it is the official emergency hospital for the fair, and the first operational unit to be modeled after the prototype, developed at the Automedic Research Center, Montgomery, Alabama. A central core houses operating rooms, treatment facilities. Twenty-two wedge-shaped rooms surround the core.

Patient is returned to his room, in bed, from central-core intensive care area through a movable panel.

All hospital procedures are monitored from one location, including readings on condition of patients.

Outer "ring" of the hospital is a corridor giving access to the rooms, thus preventing contamination of the central hospital facilities. The hospital is designed for use in smaller communities, as a "satellite" to the large, general hospitals, and for use by developing nations which lack extensive medical facilities. Latest evolutions in equipment, procedures and patient care are employed. The building itself is constructed mainly of prefabricated, lightweight aluminum panels insulated with foam plastic.

Recent Cases In Cass Court

VIRGINIA — George E. Wulf of Ashland has been fined $25 plus court costs for passing a fraudulent check to the Middleton tavern in Virginia. Wulf pled not guilty to the charge brought by State's Attorney Richard Mills, but then changed his plea to that of guilty. Associate Judge Fred Reither delayed sentencing until Wulf paid the $10 check to Robert Middleton.

A modified support order was entered by the court, against Lane Jones of Beardstown. Jones was ordered to pay $25 per week for the support of his five minor children in the state of New York, and pay $80 in back support payments.

State's Attorney Mills filed pleadings for contempt in the delinquent personal property tax case against Ralph Anderson of Beardstown. Anderson was ordered by the court a year ago to pay off a delinquent tax judgment in the amount of $83.14 plus court costs. A contempt hearing will take place July 27 before Judge Reither at the courthouse in Virginia.

Fires In Home Prevalent Says Safety Expert

"If all the homes completely destroyed by fire each year were placed on both sides of a residential street, they would form a flaming avenue of homes stretching from Chicago to Phoenix!" according to safety education specialist Daryle Wilson of Chenoa.

Seventy per cent of all fires are dwelling fires, and four out of five persons killed in such conflagrations are under 14 years of age. Annually 12,000 people die in fires.

Many such deaths are completely avoidable, according to Wilson. Bodies of children are usually found under a bed or in the back of a closet. Such presence of mind means the child could have been taught to escape the burning dwelling.

"Teach your child to crawl out on his stomach. Teach him to jump out of a window properly, hanging straight from the window sill before falling to the ground. Teach him to sleep with his bedroom door closed,"

Wilson said.

Speaking to the Jacksonville Kiwanis Club, the safety specialist performed demonstrations to illustrate the four cause of fire which nationally create the heaviest losses: smoking and matches, misuse of electricity, misuse of heating systems, and lightning. Fourth-ranked lightning is number one on farms only, according to Wilson.

The specialist recommended family fire drills to help save lives.

Guests of Kiwanis were Bill Leland and Dan G. Smede.

Mountain View, Ark., To Preserve, Nature Folk Singing And Culture

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Ark. (AP)—Since World War I, things have been steadily going downhill in this community in the Ozarks foothills.

The young folks set out for the big city and new opportunity and now Stone County has only 6,200 people, mostly farmers, retired persons and welfare clients.

It has no industry and little chance of getting any because it can't promise raw materials, trained labor or proximity to markets.

But Mountain View is determined not to die. It has decided to offer to America a place where the art of folk singing and folk culture will be preserved and nurtured. It is counting on its native culture to bring new life.

Mountain View, with a population of 863, is the county seat. It also is the home of folk singer

James ARA director. "This is the first time an area has been on its culture, rather than some scenic attraction, to draw tourists. And it's the first time the government has considered helping in such a project."

Plans are ambitious. A 2,000-seat auditorium would be built for folk singing and folk drama presentations. Around it would be classrooms for instruction in folk music, folk art, folk dancing and folklore.

There would be an arts and crafts center where craftsmen would demonstrate and sell their work. In nearby buildings visitors would be taught how to make things.

Cost is estimated at $1.8 million. Most of this would be government money, with revenue from the facility going to repay loans.

Will the entire project collapse if ARA decides not to back it financially?

"Definitely not," says Glen Hinkle, a Mountain View utility executive who heads the Stone County Development Council. "We'll build what we can when we can. This project is the economic salvation of the county, and we don't intend to drop it."

The only opposition to the proposed folk center comes from a few who believe the influx of tourists will change their town.

"But there aren't many of these," Driftwood says. "I was talking to one of them the other day, and after he cussed for a while, I walked him up on a nearby hill and said:

"John, I remember standing here with you 20 years ago and those power lines weren't over there on that rise, and that highway down there was dusty gravel and you didn't see two cars on it every hour."

"By George, Jimmy," John answered. "It's changed on us already."

Panhandle Firm Plans Expansion

SPRINGFIELD — Construction on its $23.1 million expansion program which will benefit eleven Illinois utilities will begin next week. Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Company announced today.

The construction announcement followed issuance by the Federal Power Commission in Washington of its approval for the increase in natural gas deliveries. The authorization came 12 months to the date of the filing of the request with the Federal Power Commission.

The total project will make 130 m.c.f. daily of new gas volumes available to 45 utilities in Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri and Michigan.

To transport increased volumes to its customers, Panhandle will build 171 miles of new pipeline, requiring 35,200 tons of steel and install six compressor engines, totaling 24,500 horse power at eight pumping stations.

Of the total expenditure investment, $8.2 will be extended in Illinois—451 miles of main transmission line and horse power additions at the Glenarm, Pleasant Hill and Bartonville compressor stations.

Colt League Takes Tourney Title 12-0

The Jacksonville Colt League all-stars made it a clean sweep with a second straight lopsided victory over Central Illinois, 12-0, to cop the local district tourney.

Joe Wilkerson hurled his second straight masterpiece, a one-hit job, and fanned 13. Only one ball was hit out of the infield, a first-inning single by Dan Porter.

The locals erupted for five runs in the third, three more in the third, and ended it with four in the fifth on the 12-run ruling.

New York Buries Tigers, 14-2, On 20-Hit Assault

DETROIT (AP)—Bobby Richardson stroked four hits and Joe Pepitone drove in four runs as the New York Yankees buried Detroit 14-2 Saturday under a 20-hit assault.

The victory moved the second-place Yankees to within one-half game of the American League-leading Baltimore Orioles, who played a night game with Washington.

New York knocked out starter Dave Wickham in a four-run first inning and tattooed two Tiger relief pitchers for eight runs and eight hits in the second before rain halted play for 48 minutes.

Pepitone singled home two runs in the first and doubled in a pair in the second. Richardson and Tony Kubek each singled and doubled in the second, when the Yankees sent 12 men to the plate.

The 20 hits, biggest All output of the season, enabled Jim Bouton to coast to his 10th victory against eight defeats.

Richardson, Mickey Mantle, John Blanchard and Clete Boyer each drove in two runs. Al Kaline singled home the Tigers' first run in the fifth inning and scored the other after tripling in the ninth.

New York 400 000—14 20 0 Detroit 000 010 001—2 8 3 Bouton and Blanchard; Wickham, Egan (1), Sherry (2), Regan (6), Sparna (8) and Roarke. W—Bouton, 10-8. L—Wickham 12-7.

METS BOMB BRAVES BY 10-0 DIFFERENCE

NEW YORK (AP)—The last place New York Mets exploded for a 10-0 victory over the Milwaukee Braves Saturday that featured four straight hits by Tim Lincecum and homers by Joe Christopher and George Altman.

Tracy Stallard pitched a three-hitter for the Mets, and made his record 6-13. It was Stallard's first major league shutout.

Harkness singled in the first and scored when Christopher hit his 10th homer, a d singled again in the sixth in front of Altman's fourth homer. The Mets also got six runs in the fifth after two were out.

Harkness doubled one run in, Altman and Jesse Gonder each singled in two and Roy McMillan drove the last run over.

An old-timers game, played by members of the squads in the 1939 All-Star Game at Yankee Stadium, preceded the regular game. The score was 0-0, in the two inning contest.

George Case singled and Bill Dickey doubled for the American League. Ducky Medwick and Frank McCormick each singled for the National. Bob Feller and Lefty Gomez each pitched an inning for the Americans, and Johnny Vander Meer and Whitlow Wyatt split the National League pitching chores.

EXHIBITION GAME
The managers and the coaches of the Pony League will play the Pony League All-Stars in an exhibition game at Nichols Park starting at 8 p.m.

The game will be played on Pony League distances. There is no admission charge for the game.

The Jacksonville Merchants will entertain Springfield City Water, Light and Power in a doubleheader today at Nichols Park.

The Little Eight League (twins) will start at 1:30 p.m. and both games will be seven-inning affairs.

The strong Springfield squad is fighting for the loop lead with Florence and Riverchamps a 14-5 whipping three weeks ago in a single game. No admission is charged to the Merchants games.

Stan Hayes led off the third with a clean single, followed by walks to Wilkerson and Creston Whitaker. Charles Robson stroked a two-run double to start the scoring.

Mike Fitzpatrick reached base on an error and John Dean singled another home. A walk and a two-run error drove in the last two of the frame for a 5-0 lead.

Three more came across in the fourth on five hits. Rich Coble, Whitaker, Robson and John Minor stroked singles, and Fitzpatrick clouted a double for the three and a 7-0 advantage.

The final four came in the fourth on only two hits. Three walks and singles by Robson and Dean ended the scoring for the evening.

Jacksonville will now advance to the regional tournament next week.

7 New Members To Be Inducted In Hall Of Fame

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP)—Seven new members of the Baseball Hall of Fame will be inducted Monday on the site where the institution was dedicated 25 years ago.

Those receiving their plaques will be Luke Appling, Urban Fieber, Burleigh Grimes and Heinie Manush. John Montgomery Ward, Tim Keefe and Miller Huggins will be inducted posthumously.

Appling, a brilliant shortstop with the Chicago White Sox from 1930 to 1950, was elected by the Baseball Writers' Association of America last Feb. 20. The others were appointed by the 12-man Veterans' Committee on Feb. 22.

One of the features of the silver anniversary celebration will be a clash between the Washington Senators and New York Mets in the annual Hall of Fame game at 1 p.m., EST, on Doubleday Field.

Hall of Famers back for a reunion will be George Sisler, Dizzy Dean, Frankie Frisch, Charlie Gehringer, Bill Terry, Elmer Flick, Ted Lyons, Joe McCarthy, Bill McKechnie, Sam Rice, Ray Schalk and Cronin. Baseball officials attending will include Boston Red Sox President Tom Yawkey, Mets' president George Weiss, Washington general manager George Selig, and International League president Tommy Richardson.

Membership Now 101
The induction of the select seven swells the Hall of Fame membership to 101. Fieber, like Appling, spent his entire major league career with the White Sox. A right-handed pitcher, he won 253 and lost 211 from 1914 through 1944.

Grimes, an aggressive campaigner from 1916 to 1934, worked for seven clubs, almost entirely in the National League. His record was 270 victories and 212 defeats. Like Fieber, he was a spitball pitcher.

Huggins, who managed the New York Yankees to six pennants in an eight-year period, from 1921 through 1928, was named for his skill at holding the reins. He joins such other illustrious diamond strategists as Joe McCarthy, John McGraw, Connie Mack, Hughie Jennings, Bill McKechnie and Harry Wright.

Won 18 Straight
Keefe pitched 19 straight victories for the New York Giants in 1888 and won 345 games in his career. Ward, who played from 1878 to 1894 was a great shortstop and an outstanding pitcher. He also played second base and outfield. As a batter, he collected over 2,000 hits. As a pitcher, he won 160 games, including a perfect, no-man-reach-first performance for Providence against Buffalo, June 17, 1880.

Manush, a strapping outfielder, compiled a .330 batting average in 17 years in the majors. He led the American League in hitting in 1937 with a .378 batting average. Appling, with a .310 lifetime batting average, paced the American League twice, with .388 in 1936 and .329 in 1943.

CLAY GETS MESSAGE WHILE ON CANVAS
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) Cassius Clay, heavyweight champion, says he got a million dollar message from the beyond when a clubfighter decked him during a training bout.

Chip Johnson, who has a 7-5 record, started the champion with a short right hand to Clay's unprotected chin Friday.

Cassius shook his head and got up quickly, just as the bell rang. Johnson didn't wait to be told that the workout was finished.

"Let me out of here," he said, jumping from the ring. "Tell me Clay was jiving." Clay insisted that he was not jiving.

"I was tagged," said Clay. "This is a warning. Somebody is telling me, 'You're not ready for this.' Your heart has got to be in tune with what you're doing."

"I've been living on doughnuts and milk. I've got to eat some more steaks."

It was the first knockdown in a gym for Clay since he turned professional, said his trainer, Angelo Dundee.

Coach Dick Sisler of the Cincinnati Reds decided the 1950 National League pennant when he hit a home run against the Brooklyn Dodgers in the final game. He was a Phillie outfielder that season.

Baltimore Keeps League Lead, 5-4

BALTIMORE (AP)—Jerry Adair's run-scoring single capped a four-run rally in the eighth inning that vaulted Baltimore to a 5-4 victory over Washington Saturday night.

The triumph kept the first-place Orioles one game ahead of New York in the American League race.

Sam Bowers delivered a key single in the uprising, driving in two runs with two out and the bases loaded. His hit came off Ron Kline, who had just relieved starter Bennie Daniels.

The Orioles loaded the bases on singles by Earl Robinson, Boog Powell and Brooks Robinson. Following Bowers' hit, Charles Lau beat out a slow roller along the first base line, sending Brooks Robinson home with the tying run. Then came Adair's winning single to left field.

The triumph gave the Orioles a 24-5 record in one-run games.

MAZEROSKI SPARKS 6-3 PIRATE EDGE
CINCINNATI (AP)—Bill Mazeroski homered and ignited a three-run rally with a single as Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati 6-3 Saturday.

Mazeroski's homer off Joe Nuxhall in the second tied the game 1-1. The Reds scored on Vada Pinson's homer in the first.

Mazeroski led off the fourth with a single, went to second when Nuxhall balked and scored on pitcher Vernon Law's single. Bailey then doubled in Law and came home on Bill Virdon's second of three singles.

The Pirates increased their lead to 6-1 in the seventh on Roberto Clemente's single and Donn Clendenon's home run.

Long, Hansen Set Marks

U.S. Leads Russia In Track And Field

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Dallas Long and Fred Hansen set world records Saturday to spark the United States to an amazing show of strength against Russia in the first day of their two-day track and field dual.

Long hit 67 feet 10 inches in the shot to erase his own world mark of 65-10½ and his pending mark of 66-3¼.

Hansen vaulted 17 feet 4 inches, eclipsing his pending record of 17-2.

At the end of the first day the American men led Russia 61-46.

The meet was widely heralded as a preview of the Olympics, since Russia and the United States are the two great powers of the track world.

It was a day of surprises and probably the biggest came in the women's events, where the United States scored one-two slams in the 100 meters and high jump and won the 400 meter relay to wind up the day leading 27-25 in points.

Victory In Sight
Short of a calamity, the United States will win the men's side of the competition by a wide margin, stay fairly close in the women's events, and probably achieve for the first time in the history of the meet an over-all triumph.

There was one bitter disappointment for the American team. Ralph Boston, the Olympic champion in the broad jump, was beaten by one quarter of an inch by Leonid Barkovitsky of Russia, who did 8.03 meters or 26-4¼ inches. Boston did 26-4, 8.02 meters.

Mike Larrabee, Ventura, Calif., and Ollan Cassell, Houston, Texas, were one-two in the 400 meters, Larrabee doing 46.0.

Gerry Lindgren, 18-year-old Spokane youth, engineered a major upset in winning the 100-meter run, and the U.S. scored slams in both the men's and women's 100 meter dashes.

Henry Carr and John Moon teamed up for one-two in the 200-meter dash.

Cardinals Outlast Loop Leaders 10-9

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Mike Cuellar's relief pitching and a key double play snuffed out a ninth-inning Philadelphia rally after seven runs had scored, and St. Louis escaped with a 10-9 victory Saturday.

The fantastic rally almost nullified the hitting of the Cardinals' Ken Boyer, who clouted two homers, including his second grand slam of the season.

Cuellar then came on and got pinch hitter John Herrnstein to load.

Hobbie walked pinch hitter Tony Gonzalez for another run, and he left for Bob Taylor with a 2-0 count on Richie Allen. Taylor completed the walk to Allen and gave up a two-run single to Alex Hanner, playing his first major league game.

Deal For Bunning Steal For Phillies

These are not excerpts from they are about the same ball-

College All-Star Game Has Long List Of Great Signal Callers

The College All-Star football game has a long history of outstanding performances by quarterbacks. Most of the great signal callers of the sport have trotted out under the spotlight in Soldiers' field for the midsummer gridiron classic, which this year will be played on Aug.
7.

Last year Ron VanderKelen, who played only one full season at Wisconsin, led the collegians to a 20 to 17 victory over the mighty Green Bay Packers. For his feats, which included throwing a 74-yard touchdown pass to his Wisconsin teammate, Pat Richter, which clinched the decision, Vander-Kelen was voted the most valuable player in the game.

Quarterbacks have dominated the most valuable player voting by newsmen covering the game.
The list includes John Hadl,
Kansas, 1962; Bill Kilmer,
U.C.L.A., 1961; Bob Placock,
Michigan, 1959; Jim Ninowski, Michigan State, who tied for the award with Halfback Bobby Mitchell of Illinois in 1958; John Brodie, Stanford, 1957; Ralph Guglielmi, Notre Dame, 1955; and Vito (Babe) Parilli, Kentucky, 1952.

Three This Year
When the All-Stars meet the Chicago Bears this year, they will have three fine athletes at the vital quarterback post —
George Mira, Miami, Fla.; Pete Beathard, Southern California; and Jack Concannon, Boston college.

Head Coach Otto Graham of the All-Stars, one of the greatest quarterbacks of all time, is well satisfied with the trio. But whether they can do the job VanderKelen did "only time will tell," he says.

Mira is perhaps the most famous football player in Miami's history. He eludes chasing tacklers with such nerve and consistency that he has been dubbed The Matador.

When seemingly hopelessly trapped, Mira is at his best.
He gets out of impossible situations even more often than Little Orphan Anne. As one of his opponents said, "I must have lost 15 pounds just chasing that Mira around the field."

Last season, Mira completed 172 of 334 pass attempts for 2,155 yards and 10 touchdowns.
Beathard has been a smooth performer in the All-Stars' train-camp. He throws a good, smooth ball and is extremely accurate.

Set Rose Bowl Record
Pete set a Rose Bowl record when he threw four touchdowns passes in Southern Cal's 42 to 37 victory over Wisconsin in the 1963 game. In that contest, he threw 12 times, completing eight for 190 yards.

Beathard also holds his school's all-time total offense record. He piled up 3,046 yards in his three years, 2,374 passing and 672 rushing. Last season, he completed 66 passes in 140 attempts for 944 yards and five touchdowns.

Concannon is regarded as the best quarterback that ever came out of Boston college. In his senior year, he completed 85 of 192 aerials for 1,328 yards and eight touchdowns, ran for

Mussatto Tells About New Look For WIU Course

Harry Mussatto, who has played on golf courses from Hawaii to Chicago, tells about the new look for the Western Illinois University's course — a couple of WIU holes are being preempted by a $2½ million campus school.

He has played in Japan, England, and Canada.

The eighth and ninth fairways on the WIU course are being cut off by a new road. The area south of the new road, eighth and ninth holes, will be the site of a new university school for children, kindergarten through twelfth grade.

A new No. 1 tee is being constructed. The first six holes will be the same as before. The seventh hole will be moved as will the eighth fairway.

The total new course distance will be around 3200 yards in length which is longer than the old layout and will be more of a normal distance for a nine hole course. The par will increase from 35 to 36.

"The new layout of the course would be one stroke tougher because the old eighth and ninth fairways were wide open," the coach said.

Which hole is the toughest?
"The fourth is probably the one because of the blind second shot up the hill to the green,"
he said.

Fewer Pars Seared
During the conference tournament held here at WIU three years ago, fewer pars were scored on this hole than any other hole on the course.

Harry Mussatto as a student at Illinois State University at Normal was a medalist in the Interstate Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. As a coach at WIU his team has won IAC championship ten times beginning in 1951.

He was at ISU when ISU won the champions' cup in 1950.

Mussatto knows his golf courses since he has played on 300 golf courses in 25 of 50 states. He started golfing as a caddy at the age of eight. He says there are over 50 excellent golf courses in the Chicago area.

In the 100 mile radius of Macomb, Mussatto stated that there are some very fine golf courses to play. Four of the finest are the Peoria Country Club, Illini Country Club, Springfield, Quincy Country Club, and the Soangetahna Country Club, Galesburg.

The name Harry Mussatto is a name to contend with on the fairways of the Chicago area — in amateur tournaments, in city and county. At one time or other, he has been champ in practically all the northern Illinois amateur contests.

He always tops fellow faculty members as a golfer. Recently, when WIU faculty members 30-strong went to ISU to compete with the ISU faculty, he was number one golfer even though WIU lost the contest by one point.

Mussatto almost set the course record at ISU — missing by one stroke firing an even par of 67.

White Wins 64th Women's Western

CHICAGO (AP) — Combining booming drives with torrid putting, Barbara Fay White of Shreveport, La., defeated Patty Shook of Saginaw, Mich., 4 and 3 Saturday to win the 64th
Women's Western Amateur Golf Championship.

Miss White, a 23-year-old blonde, soared 4-up after the morning 18 on the 6,384-yard, par 37-38-73 Oak Park Country Club course.

She kept expanding it during the afternoon 18 and was 7 up after 24 holes. Then her game seemed to go sour and Miss Shook, 21, a Valparaiso University senior who won the national collegiate crown this year, captured the next four holes with two pars and two birdies.

Miss White again went 4 up on the 30th by dropping a 33-foot birdie three putt. From then on, her game was as hot as it was all week long.

They halved the 31st, Miss Shook missing an eight-foot putt.

The 32nd also was halved with Miss White dropping a six-footer for a par four.

On the decisive 160-yard 33rd hole both were up with their shots. Miss Shook stuck a five-iron shot five feet from the pin.
Miss White two-putted from 30 feet. Then when miss Shook missed her 5-foot putt they halved the hole and the match ended.

Miss Shook had a difficult time putting her game together in the morning round as she carded a 39-43-83 against her foe's 36-39-75, winning only one hole-the 18th when Miss White three-putted.

ESTIMATED RECEIPTS CHICAGO (AP) — Estimated livestock receipts for Monday are 7,000 hogs, 11,000 cattle and 800 sheep.

Chicago Livestock Market Report

CHICAGO (AP)—Trade was rather slow most of the time last week in the slaughter steer market and prices finished about steady after having been 25 cents a hundredweight lower at midweek.

A weaker wholesale market for carcass beef contributed to the softer trend. However, the supply for the week was somewhat smaller. Buyers noted that cattle slaughter during the previous week was the fifth largest of record.

Butcher hogs sold 25 to 50 cents lower although the week's run was the smallest in about two years. It amounted to 24-000 head, compared with 24,500 a week ago.

The week's top reached $19 very sparingly on Tuesday but on Thursday the best price was $18 for the same weights and grades. Shipper demand was improved compared with recent weeks and the average price for the week was estimated at $17.60. A week ago it was $17.32.

The market for spring slaughter lambs was strong to 50 cents higher.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—A flood of best-in-history corporate profits and a string of favorable business developments somehow failed to impress the stock market last week.

Prices started at an historic peak and closed a few notches lower. The setback was the first in seven weeks and was the worst in three months, based on the averages.

The setback thus, at least temporarily, halted a summer rally which had hiked the averages to new peaks on the last three Fridays.

Most brokers seemed to think it was a normal consolidation period when profits were being taken. Others thought most of the record earnings had been discounted well in advance.

Other factors listed by analysts included concern over the Viet Nam situation and the racial strife in New York City.
Some European selling of holdings also was mentioned.

The good news included a drop in the federal budget deficit for the last fiscal year from previous predictions, a 10 percent increase in cash dividend payments in the first half over a year ago, a number of dividend boosts and the settlement of a 30-day strike by new car haulers along the East Coast.

Volume dipped to 22,264,110 shares from 23,503,309 the previous week and was below 5 million each day.

The Associated Press 60-stock average fell 1.8 to close at 320.2.
Dow Jones industrials were off 5.71, more than offsetting the previous week's gain.

The big three of the auto industry, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler, were among companies experiencing new highs in the first half and second quarter.

The bond market showed a glimmer of mid-summer health.
Prices generally held firm or moved higher. U.S. government bonds logged scattered gains.

Volume totaled $40.89 million par value, lighter than last week's $46.40 million, but almost double the $2.48 million turnover a year ago.

Nearly 1,000 law enforcement officials—state and local police and sheriff's deputies—braced for the possibility of renewed rioting.

They wore steel helmets and were armed with fire hoses, tear gas and night sticks—all used during the overnight outbreak. They led police dogs on leashes but did not fire their guns.

More than 80 persons, most of them Negroes, were injured, and about the same number were arrested. Some of the injured were hurt seriously.

The outbreak was compared to the week of racial violence that has racked New York City's Harlem, also blamed on alleged brutality of white police toward Negroes.

A Negro leader said the rioting here was a reaction to long smoldering anger between Negroes and Rochester police.

Hundreds of young Negroes surged through the streets in violence that went into the early morning hours of Saturday.

They battled with police and firemen, threw stones, looted stores and overturned automobiles, including that of the Rochester police chief, William Lombard. He was injured slightly when he sought to appeal to the rioting crowds. Some whites joined in the rioting.

By declaring a state of emergency, Homer was able to invoke his powers to mobilize all city forces—and to call for outside help to protect lives and property.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller sent 200 state police to the scene to help local police, augmented earlier by sheriff's deputies and police from surrounding communities.

OAS Votes For Sanctions Against Cuba

something to think about," said a Venezuelan delegate, "and make July 26 a day of true rejoicing in the hemisphere."

Mexico and Chile expressed objections to sanctions at a midday session of the conference.

Venezuela's charges of a series of bombings, attempts by Castro forces to take over the government of Venezuela, and of Cuba's shipment of munitions to Venezuela—were confirmed by an investigating committee of the Organization of American States. Various terrorist acts have occurred also this year, some of them as recently as last week.

Sanchez Gavito, Mexican ambassador to the OAS, headed his country's delegation. Mexico's foreign minister, Jose Gorostiza, was the only hemisphere relations chief to spurn the conference because of opposition to sanctions.

Chile's foreign minister, Julio Philippi, told the conference his country has "grave doubts" that the proposed measures would be adequate. He left no doubt that Chile "is disposed to condemn energetically the acts committed by Cuba" but contends it has a right to maintain diplomatic relations with Cuba for various reasons, "among them humanitarian."

The basic points of the conference majority position:
1. American republics shall not maintain diplomatic or consular relations with Cuba.
2. Interruption of all trade, direct or indirect, with Cuba, except foodstuffs, medicines and medical equipment of an emergency nature.
3. Cessation of all maritime transport with Cuba, except for humanitarian or emergency reasons.

ARREST COMMUNIST LEADER OF RIOTS

tenement windows. Police kept the strollers moving.

Police brushed off an argument by Epton that his followers only intended a peaceful walk.

Almost simultaneously with the flailing of the parade, the city obtained a State Supreme Court order to prohibit the march, but notice had not been served on Epton at the time of his arrest.

Shortly before the city made its court move, Gov. Nelson A.
Rockefeller issued a statement saying he was willing to furnish National Guard troops if necessary both in New York City and in Rochester, N.Y., where Negroes rioted Friday night and early Saturday.

The governor, in a statement issued through his Albany office from his Tarrytown home, said rioting and looting "from whatever source or for whatever reason" will be met by the full force of the law."

Prior to issuance of the court order, a statement issued from City Hall said: "Acting on instructions from Mayor Robert F. Wagner, Corp. Counsel Leo
A. Larkin applied today for an order restraining the Progressive Labor Movement, the Harlem Defense Council and the Community Council on Housing from assembling, marching or demonstrating or engaging in other activities likely to induce civil rebellion and the overthrow of lawful government."

The order applied to an area bounded by the East River and Hudson River drives and by 110th and 155th streets—encompassing all of Harlem, the nation's largest Negro community.

The plaintiffs were the City of New York and Manhattan Dist.
Atty. Frank S. Hogan.

But leaders of other Harlem groups issued counterpamphlets urging the people of Harlem not to participate.

Leaders of some Harlem organizations opposed to the march strove to persuade its sponsors to call it off to avoid violence.

"We don't want to get black people killed in Harlem to defend Peking and Moscow," said James Lawson, a black nationalist leader. "We don't want to swap one slave master for another."

Lawson said black nationalist and Muslim groups, including those led by Elijah Muhammad

Charles Blesse Dies Saturday In St. Louis

Charles J. Blesse, 109 Spaulding Place, passed away at 1:30 a.m. Saturday at Barnes hospital in St. Louis where he had undergone open heart surgery Friday.

But he's some swimmer now and retrieving is his favorite business.

Although Lucas, Sr., is a fine friend he lives too far from the river to suit Noble, who long ago staked out the Boatel operated by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Vannier as his domain, something to be watched over and enjoyed 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

If somebody could throw a cypress sawlog into the river Noble would try to bring it to shore, and he'd worry and stew around it until he got the job done.

There are many, many boats in the Illinois river today and all of them have bumpers and fenders devices to protect the side of the boat when it is tied up alongside a wharf. They're generally made of plastic now, they cost from $4 to $8 each, and boats upstream are always losing them.

It didn't take much training for Noble to keep his eye open for these floating objects and bring them in. The photo above shows how Boatel Proprietor Vannier trained him.

Paul threw out the bumper as far as he could. Noble found that the plastic discs were too large for him to mouth, but he soon learned that they were tied together by a line and he'd worry around until he got a grip on the cord, and then come cruising in as shown in the photo above.

Now he's so well trained that if somebody sitting on the cool and delightful front porch of Boatel sees something floating downstream Paul or Merle can call Noble, pick up a pebble, throw it in the direction of the floating object and yell "Fetch."

Noble may think his eyes are going on the blink and he needs glasses, but he plunges into the river and swims around until he finds something that looks worth hauling home.

'Noble'—A Dog Well Named

Thanks to Jacksonville's dog law, a splendid Labrador retriever is living a dog's life on the Illinois river.

His name is "Noble," a fine name for a dog with exemplar behavior marked by courtesy, courage, intelligence and industry. Two years old now, his sleek black coat covers 75 pounds of tense muscle.

Bred in Jersey county, he came to Jacksonville as a pup to live with Mr. and Mrs. Merle Lucas, Jr., 1508 W. Lafayette avenue.

They had a good place to keep him, but didn't like the idea of keeping him tied up during the summer months so they took him to Naples and turned him over to Merle Lucas, who lives just this side of the levee.

Noble soon learned about the river. The second day he was in Naples he fell off a duckwalk in front of the Naples Boatel and nearly drowned before he learned to swim.

But he's some swimmer now and retrieving is his favorite business.

Although Lucas, Sr., is a fine friend he lives too far from the river to suit Noble, who long ago staked out the Boatel operated by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Vannier as his domain, something to be watched over and enjoyed 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Ranch House Crew To Vacation Together At Wisconsin Resort

It is not unusual for businesses to suspend operation and allow employees to have a vacation at the same time. It is unusual when the employees all trek off together to a summer resort for that vacation and that is exactly what the personnel at The Ranch House is going to do.

Such a plan has been brewing in the minds of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Birdsall, proprietors of the popular eating place, for a number of years and 1964 will see its materialization.

The expense paid vacation for the Ranch House gang will be at the Bonnie View Resort, Devils Lake, Wisconsin. The week's trip was offered to all of the 35 employees. South Jacksonville Village Marshal and Mrs. Orlia Thomas are also going along as specially invited guests. Several employees will not be able to make the Wisconsin jaunt due to family obligations.

Leave Aug. 10th
The entourage will leave Jacksonville Monday, Aug. 10th and return the following Sunday. The Ranch House will not open for business until Aug. 17th, allowing another week of vacation before the crew returns to work.

At State Park
Three large cottages have been rented at the state park resort which offers swimming, hiking, horseback riding and other vacation delights. There are three married couples in the group of employees and all have families. These are the only children making the trip. The young car hops, who range in age from 15 years up, will snooze in sleeping bags in camp-out tents while the balance of the group will occupy the cottages.

Much of the food to be served during the week will be transported from the local restaurant to the resort, and prepared in the kitchens of the three cottages.

Mrs. Birdsall has committees designated for daily KP and household duties. The 'work' will be evenly distributed and each person will have only one shift to fill during the vacation stay.

Even Taking "Mascots!"
Mascots for the vacation band crew will be the Birdsalls' two Dachshunds, Hans and Fritz, who will ride in the air-conditioned Cadillac, along with the supplies.

About six cars are expected to be in the Wisconsin bound procession with Marshal Thomas' car taking the lead.

A Boondoggle To End Boondoggles

In a clearing in a remote area of the West Virginia mountains, near the little community of Sugar Grove, there exists a gigantic monolith made of 17,000 cubic yards of concrete.

Archeologists a thousand years hence might well ponder about the meaning of this strange monument, even as we do about England's Stonehenge.

If they were to learn that the ancient men of the 20th century expended $63 million and countless manhours of thought and labor in planning and erecting it, their puzzlement would be all the greater.

The concrete foundation, along with a 500-ton pindle bearing and other assorted artifacts scattered around the site, are all that remain from the U.S. Navy's seven-year attempt to build the world's largest radio-telescope.

Although the project was abandoned in 1962, the full story was not told until this year with the release of a 53-page report by the General Accounting Office, the government's watchdog on expenditures.

The telescope was conceived long before the first Sputnik went into orbit, but its story is a capsule example of the Cold War-Space Race frenzy that gripped America a few years back—as well as a lesson in the cost to the nation of inter-service rivalry and allowing the phrase "national security" to justify any kind of haste, waste and confusion.

The idea began modestly in 1948 in the Naval Research Laboratory as a proposal for a large radiotelescope to detect radio signals from space. By 1958, the design had evolved into what would have been the largest movable land-based structure ever built—a great reflector dish 600 feet in diameter (more than seven acres in area), lifted some 70 stories above its foundation.

In that year, Congress was told that the cost would be $20 million and the first appropriations were made. By the end of 1957, however, the cost estimate had risen to more than $52 million.

Then, under the ominous shadows of the Sputniks, the Defense Department decided to combine certain military functions with the telescope, possibly the monitoring of Russian radio signals reflected from the moon. This raised the cost to $79 million.

The project was handled by BuDocks (the Bureau of Docks and Yards), which, anxious to secure a place in space for the Navy, made the fundamental error of giving the go-ahead for initial construction before all the design bugs were worked out—and the bugs began multiplying startlingly.

Scientists who expressed doubts, including those in the Naval Research Lab who dreamed up the idea in the first place, were excluded from the project.

Meanwhile, cost estimates leaped upward to $126 million. NRL plans had called for a staff of 30 to operate the telescope; DuBocks raised it to 1,146 men, which meant additional housing and other facilities. Estimates passed the $200-million mark.

Late in 1961, Congress put a ceiling of $135 million on the project. About this time the Defense Department concluded that satellites could handle the military chores it had in mind and told the unhappy Navy to cancel the whole thing. But it was another year before the momentum that had been built up petered out—at a final cost of $63 million.

Secretary Robert McNamara's revision of and tight control over Pentagon management and procurement practices make it unlikely that anything like the Sugar Grove boondoggle will ever happen again.

McNamara recently announced that he had saved the nation $2.5 billion through a few common sense measures such as directing the purchase of a cheaper dog tag or buying commercially available items rather than having them specially made for the services.

Some of this economy however, is "paper savings"—sums that might have been spent on this or that but weren't (like an extra $150 million not spent on Sugar Grove?).

Sugar Grove may never happen again, but its consequences—a reaction in Congress against the vast cost of necessary scientific research, the money and brains that were diverted for so many years from other projects, the adverse reflection on the scientific community—may in the long run prove far more costly than $63 million.

300,000 Youngsters Are Emotionally Upset; Why?

By RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
WASHINGTON (NEA)—An unpublished study made at the National Institute of Mental Health finds:

● Almost a third of a million youngsters 17 and below are now under care in outpatient psychiatric clinics in the United States.

● Two-thirds of these are 14 and under.

● Compared with a decade ago, three times as many children 14 and under are being admitted to mental hospitals annually.

● The suicide rate among teen-agers is up sharply.

● Though a drop in the number of total patients in mental institutions is expected by 1970, patients in the 10-24 age range are expected to increase.

Concerned with this trend, research men at the National Institute of Mental Health have been analyzing new investigations on how "delinquent" mentally ill and delinquent teen-agers get that way.

This research has turned up these tentative findings on teen-agers by individual investigators: (A good deal of this work has been not yet been fully verified by backup research.)

● Moving from poor to good housing does not, on the average, result in measurable emotional improvement of the teen-ager and his family. In fact, the neuroses of teen-agers may increase with improved housing.

● High school boys who later became schizophrenic were found to have less interest in girls than the average teen-ager.

● Parents of teen-agers tend to over-interfere with their teen-agers on those teen-age problems which the parents themselves failed at when they were youngsters. This prevents the teen-ager from developing his ability to think and act independently.

Numbers of adolescents are being hospitalized because of severe emotional problems in the period of their first separation from their parents during the freshman year of college. Studies indicate the parents of many of these disturbed young people are themselves highly concerned about their own ability to cope with life's problems.

A Good Many Researchers are coming to believe increasingly in the importance of fathers to teen-agers.

One investigator finds the problems of teen-age girls in "identifying themselves" as women are greatly increased when there is no father in the home.

Another group of investigators finds that a high frequency of theft and personal crime tends to occur in those societies where the young boy is limited in forming a close relationship with his father.

There are indications, some researchers believe, that it is better for a boy to admire something in even a bad father than to not admire him at all.

As one investigator puts it "If the father is bank president, he's the best bank president. If he's a mechanic, he's the best. If he's a thief, he's the best thief in town. He's the strongest man in the block or he's the first fisherman or the best whittler or something."

Investigators have been working with monkeys to better understand why teen-agers and their parents act the way they do. Some have found that boy-teen-agers turn out to be strongly affected by the relationship they had with their mothers during babyhood.

One investigator reports that female monkeys who as infants received no mother love "became helpless, hopeless, heartless mothers devoid, or almost totally devoid, of any maternal feeling."

In Hollywood

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD, (AP)—Vivien (Scarlett O'Hara) Leigh, returning to Hollywood 25 years after "Gone With the Wind," is convinced that the most glamorous woman in America doesn't live in Hollywood.

"She lives, I understand," said Vivien, "in Washington, D.C., and her name is Mrs. John F. Kennedy."

Miss Leigh is here for "Ship of Fools."

Surprisingly, this is only her third camera assignment in Hollywood. She won Oscars for the first two—"Gone With the Wind" and "Streetcar Named Desire."

"I feel, perhaps, that this is my lucky town," she says. But glamor has gone eastward from Hollywood, in her opinion.

"Mrs. Kennedy's glamor," says Vivien, "consists in a combination of beauty, style and magnificence of spirit."

"Mrs. Kennedy, whether she realizes it or not, has a great deal of potential power simply because of what she is and what she represents."

"She is glamor even to children. Little girls adore her."

As for Vivien, for her third role in Hollywood she once more is cast as a Southerner. "Ship of Fools," a sort of "Grand Hotel" affair, has an international cast including Simone Signoret, Jose Ferrer, Lee Marvin, Oskar Werner, Jose Greco and many others.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—When Otto Preminger directs a picture no one talks—not even Mynah birds.

Hugh O'Brian, back from shooting some Hawaiian scenes in "Harm's Way," says the fiery Preminger evicted the famed mynah birds from Don the Beachcomber's bistro in Honolulu.

The birds, familiar to tourists, have been fed peanuts for years. In return they say "hello" or "goodbye."

Preminger, shooting a fight sequence in the restaurant, demanded to know who was doing offstage talking.

"I'll fire whoever it is," he shouted. So the birds were fired for the afternoon.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Playwright-scripter Lawrence Roman says the flood of foreign love goddesses into Hollywood has slowed—and he's glad, along with some producer and director friends.

"Any man will look twice at a beautiful girl," says the writer of "Under the Yum Yum Tree," but a producer needs talented, hard-working actresses. Very few of these foreign flowers can act."

A GLANCE Into The Past

10 YEARS AGO
The Big Show, Ringling Bros. Barnum & Bailey, had a good day in Jacksonville Tuesday. Although hot and dusty in the afternoon the attendance was 78% of capacity and there was a sell-out at night.

A fire of unexplained origin burned down a building on the farm of George Henderson, north of Ashland, Friday. The building housed baled hay and straw and a new tractor.

There seems to be slight hopes of averting war between Austria and Serbia, but it is expected England, France, Germany and Italy will co-operate in bringing an end to this localized war by mediation as soon as possible. United States will not interfere in the quarrel.

City police last night raided an oasis in the Jacksonville desert. Quite a large quantity of beer and whisky were seized, along with 10 imbibers and the 2 proprietors.

FINDING THE WAY

Bard Speaks for Our Time

By RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

A recent trip to Stratford in Ontario underscores the enduring miracle of Shakespeare.

In a time when the problems of the aging constitute political and social controversy and the dealing with suffering adds new accents to an ancient question, the tragedy of Lear speaks with relevance. After 400 years, this play, with its Gothic proportions, provides the area for discussion, dramatizing the ancient and ever-present problem. The characters are boldly etched, unrelentingly marching toward their destiny with only Lear finding a transforming and redeeming quality.

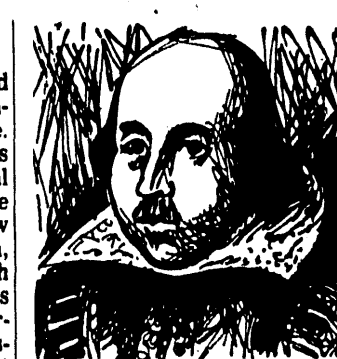

In our own time such artists as the late Albert Camus, or the Korean author Kim, or the motion picture producer Bergman restate these themes. Most of us find them harsh; for we have been accustomed to the happy ending.

Somehow, the hero of the Western drama needs to ride triumphant into the sunset while the villain languishes in exile or in jail. Yet every day renews the tragedy.

A man gives his life in a great idealism and loses his life. A citizen, filled with talent and ability, becomes his own worst enemy and stands in his own light. Generations stand opposed to each other, each unwilling to understand or communicate.

So the tragedies of jealousy, ambition, ingratitude and prejudice are spun out. This writing is "of imagination alone compact."

We need to take these long, hard looks at life. There are enormous problems of life and death, illness and health, happiness and despair. Such questions we duck and dodge. All too often we leave them unanswered, and find no faith to sustain us in the time of doubts.

We're like a gentle lady who once lived nearby. She found herself in the wrestling matches.

She'd watch this ridiculous fantasy, but sometimes it became too much for her gentle spirit. So she'd hold her hands in front of her face if it got to be too much. She didn't turn the set off. She didn't look when it got to be too tough.

There are too many of us who hide behind our own hands so that we miss the misery, the unanswered griefs, the tragedies of life. So we have no faith to sustain us in the testing moments. There is no way to forget.

This seems to be the time when "wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile, . . . Humanity must perforce prey on itself, like monsters of the deep."

Thus the 250 and more characters of Shakespeare's dramas march across this stage and we find something of the counterpart in each day. He wrote, in his own way, the underscoring of an ancient moral truth. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

FOOD FOR AMERICANS

Are We Eating More?

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
Q — Isn't it true Americans are eating more food than we used to?

A — We are eating more "meat" protein foods, yes. And more fresh fruits and vegetables. From a nutrition viewpoint, as well as enjoyment, that is good. But are eating no more of some foods, less of others, so we can't say we are eating more foods than we used to. Our buying and eating habits are changing more than our total per capita consumption. An estimate of the changes in this year's per capita food consumption by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, shows the following ups and downs:

Meat — Up about a pound (more beef, less pork and lamb).

Poultry — Up 1 1/2 pounds (1 pound of chicken, about 1/2 pound of turkey).

Fresh Fruits—Up 5 pounds. Fresh Vegetables—Up slightly.

Eggs—Down 1 or 2. Dairy Products—Down 1 percent (cheese and ice cream consumption up slightly; butter and evaporated milk down more).

Coffee—Down slightly. Cereals and Bakery Products —No change. Sugar—No change.

Mother Blamed For Teens' Disastrous Hair Peroxiding Experiment

LANDERS

By ANN LANDERS
Dear Ann Landers: Phyllis, our 14-year-old daughter, invited her girl friend to spend the night with her. The two girls decided they'd like to have some blonde streaks in their dark brown hair. They went out and bought a bottle of extra strong peroxide and you ought to see what they did to themselves.

When Phyllis and her friend showed up at the breakfast table this morning my husband and I were absolutely horrified.

The girls were sheepish and admitted that their hair didn't turn out the way they had hoped it would. The guest muttered, "I'm afraid my mother will kill me."

An hour later I received a phone call from the girl's mother. She was furious and said it was my fault. According to her, I should have kept my eye on the girls. The woman said she was taking her daughter to the beauty shop and getting her hair cut off—even if the child winds up looking like Yul Brynner.

Was it my fault? Should I insist our daughter have her hair cut off too—as punishment? I need your advice. —HAVOC IN HINDSDALE

Dear Havoc: Fourteen-year-old girls should not need punishing. The woman is blaming you unjustly.

In my book your daughter has suffered enough. Rather than give her a prison hair cut which would only add to her humiliation insist that she earn the price of a professional hair tint and have her hair restored to its natural color.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband passed away in 1959. I am 58 years old and have been the constant companion these past two years of a widower who is 63. I enjoy this man's company a great deal along with well with his married children and his grandsons call me "Nanna."

Last week for no apparent reason he said to me "I'll never marry again. Why should I? Everything is just the way I want it." I was deeply hurt because I was expecting a proposal of marriage at any moment. Things are NOT the way I want them Ann. I would like to get married again—if not to this man then to someone else. Shall I tell him how I feel? Or would it be prudent to wait a little longer and hope he will ask me to marry him on his own? —STILL PEPPEY

Dear Peppy: A man of 63 is on his own. He has been frank with you and now you ought to be frank with him. Tell him you no longer care to date just for the fun of it and since he is not interested in marriage he'd better find another "constant companion." If this doesn't produce orange blossoms give up already.

Dear Ann Landers: Byron and I have been arguing about something for weeks. We are both 22 although you probably think we sound like 9-year-olds. Whenever Byron and I go to a party or a dance he disappears the minute we arrive and I'm on my own. One of the big problems is that Byron is a terrific dancer and I am just fair. He always hunts up the shimmy queen of the crowd and never checks to see what I am doing. Believe me, I like him to dance with other girls but when he doesn't dance even one number with me I feel like a fifth wheel. I've told him he is inconsiderate but he says I am childish and demanding.

What do you say? —STRANDED

Dear Stranded: This is a date? If you drove your own car you wouldn't need Byron at all. Give him his hat and tell him to date the shimmy queens.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Purdue U. Research Likely To Double Protein In Corn

Purdue University researchers have found a genetic characteristic which could double the protein value of corn — a discovery which promises to revolutionize corn's importance in nutrition.

The biochemist and geneticist who made this discovery say a mutant gene called opaque-2 is responsible. It produces a corn with radical changes in protein makeup and in the pattern of amino acids, the protein building blocks.

"Based on the chemical analysis," explains Purdue biochemist Dr. Edwin T. Mertz, "we would predict that it (the new corn) ought to have a protein value approximately double that of ordinary corn."

The boost in protein quality can be attributed to an increase in the amino acid, lysine, the limiting essential amino acid in corn. The new corn has about twice the lysine level of normal hybrid corn.

A Long Search
At Purdue, a search for corn with a higher lysine level has been under way about 10 years. Kernels from various parts of the country and other nations were put through complicated protein extraction tests, but most showed only small variations of lysine.

Involved in the early testing were Dr. Mertz, department of biochemistry, and geneticist Dr. H. H. Kramer, a former Purdue staff member now with the University of Nebraska, and more recently, Dr. O. E. Nelson Jr., Purdue geneticist in the botany and plant pathology department.

Last fall, Mertz and Nelson found what they had been looking for.

Marked Increase
Mutant kernels with the op-aque-2 gene showed a marked increase in lysine. Succeeding tests demonstrated that the lysine level varied slightly, but was always higher than in normal seeds.

Opaque-2, one of two opaque genes commonly known, has been recognized for about 30 years but usually was considered only for its use as a marker gene by plant breeders.

Since increased lysine content is associated with the opaque appearance, the opaque appearance can be used to transfer the high lysine content to commercial strains of corn.

According to Nelson, incorporation of the gene into commercially important inbreds and building up stock of inbreds and single crosses will take five to six years, if two generations a year are obtained.

No feeding tests have been made as yet, but assuming the new corn has the same digestibility as ordinary corn, Dr. Mertz expects it would have a higher nutritional value because of its increase in lysine content. Feeding tests are planned, first in rats, then higher animals and finally in humans.

Illinois Farm Outlook

BEEF SITUATION, PRICE PROSPECTS

Are prices of feeder cattle too high? Maybe.

Many farmers are still thinking of 1962 prices, when the average for all steers at Chicago was $27.50. They forget that that price was about the best in ten years. And that in 1961 the average was only $24.20.

In 1961 we had only 88 pounds of beef per person. Last year we had 95 pounds and added nearly four million beef cattle to our herds and feedlots.

We will have over 100 pounds of beef this year and probably will be able to produce even more in 1965. We produced about 12 1/2 percent more beef in the first half of this year than in 1963; where there was 8 pounds last year, there was 9 pounds this year.

Beef output may not continue so much above 1963 levels in the last half of the year, but it seems likely to run at least 8 percent over, making an increase of 10 percent for the year.

Still More Beef
About one-fourth of the expected increase in beef output this year may be offset by a cut in imports, and 1 1/2 percent by the increase in population. Thus the increase in the supply per person seems likely to be on the order of 6 pounds, making a total of 101 pounds — give or take a pound or so.

The increased beef output this year is being produced largely by an increase in slaughter. Slaughter of cattle and calves seems likely to exceed 37 million head, 2 million more than last year. But even with this increase in slaughter, farmers and ranchers may add a million head to their pastures and feedlots, bringing the total number of cattle and calves to nearly 108 million by January 1. Such an addition would be sufficient to meet the normal increase in consumer demand in the next few years.

Prices of slaughter cattle seem likely to fluctuate in the lower 20s for several months, and probably most of the time in the next few years. This is the prospect now, but it could change rather quickly.

Cheaper Feeder Cattle

For example, if slaughter continues 10 to 12 percent over 1963 levels, the nearby prospects would be lowered and the longer run expectations would be raised. Conversely, if slaughter is soon cut back to near 1963 levels, prices would improve substantially for a few months, but would be expected to decline again sometime in 1965 or early 1966.

Cattle feeders who operate as businessmen know that profits depend on the relation between three sets of prices: (1) the price of feeder cattle, (2) the cost of gains, and (3) the price received for fat cattle. In the past two years, excessive competition among cattle feeders kept prices of feeder cattle too high in relation to the other two.

When prices of fat cattle go down, prices of replacement cattle must drop the same amount per head in order to keep returns to the cattle feeder the same as before. Prices of feeder cattle must drop two to three times as much per pound as prices of fat cattle.

SIBA Sponsors Dairy Cattle Sale At Breese

The Southern Illinois Breeding association will sponsor its second invitational Holstein sale at Breese Saturday, September 19.

SIBA members have consigned 33 of their very best young Holsteins to the sale, including many young cows just fresh, several springing heifers, and bred heifers. A few choice grade Holsteins are also included in the consignments.

High production has been the key in selecting the top quality consignments that will be offered. The dams of the consigned animals have a combined milk average of 15,873 pounds milk and 593 pounds butterfat on twice daily milking, made under loose housing conditions in southern Illinois. This production average is tremendous when compared to the average cow in Illinois on DHIA test with 11,129 pounds milk and 431 pounds butterfat.

Wool Promotion Fees Remain The Same

Deductions from wool promotion incentive payments for 1964 to finance the wool and lamb producers' self-help promotion program will continue at the same rates as in the past, Lester E. Martin, Chairman, Morgan County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee, has announced.

Deductions rates will be 1 cent per pound from shorn wool payments, and 5 cents per hundred pounds of liveweight from unshorn lamb payments.

The 1964 marketing year is the calendar year, January 1 through December 31. Payments for wool and lambs sold this year will be made beginning in April, 1965.

Chairman Martin pointed out that the promotion is conducted by the American Sheep Producers Council, Inc., under an agreement with the Secretary of Agriculture providing for advertising, sales promotion and related market development activities on wool and lamb, as authorized under the National Wool Act. The present agreement — covering the years 1962-65 — was approved in a producer referendum held in 1962.

For the 1962 marketing year — the latest for which complete figures are available — deductions from payments for financing the council's activities totaled about $2.8 million.

More than a million young people under 18 do paid work each year on America's farms, according to the Department of Agriculture. Their jobs are as varied as farming itself.

Annual sale of certified seed is more than $150 million, according to the Department of Agriculture. The return to the farmer in increased crop values is 10-20 times that amount in terms of quality, yield and weed and disease control.

Reapportionment Due To Cut Farm Voice

Farmers and rural areas stand to lose most from the drastic shakeup in state governments ordered recently by the U.S. Supreme Court on its reapportionment ruling.

In an analysis of the decision, Farm Journal magazine in its August issue states that the changes will give farmers, as well as other rural people, less voice in their states over the use of road funds, water rights, school consolidation, allocation of state school aid, real estate taxes, Extension programs, conservation, land condemnation for recreation and open spaces, and hunting laws.

If the decision stands, many states will be controlled by a few big cities. Illinois, for instance, will be "completely controlled" by the city of Chicago, according to Rep. Paul Findley of Illinois. Similar prospects face such states as New York, California, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Maryland, Utah, Washington and Arizona.

Since the Supreme Court ruling, some 60 bills have been introduced in Congress to make it clear that states have the right to decide for themselves how their state legislatures will be constituted. Some bills call for a constitutional amendment. Others would state that the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction over state apportionment.

The Supreme Court ruling,

the article states, "will toss into the ash can one of the basic, time-honored cornerstones of our system of representative government" and will bring about "one of the most sweeping over-night changes in American government since the Revolution."

Since Colonial days, the national farm magazine points out, states and the Federal government have selected one legislative house on the basis of population and the other partially or entirely by area. Now the Supreme Court has ordered both houses in each state legislature to be based on population alone.

NEW JUNIOR MEMBER OF ANGUS SOCIETY

Newly Designed Dairy Barn Protects Cows And Family From Fallout

A new 40-stall dairy barn design provides double use — for milk production and for emergency protection from radioactive fallout for the farm family and their dairy herd.

D. G. Jede, University of Illinois extension agricultural engineer, explains why the barn is good for fallout protection.

Used daily, the barn is a familiar environment in case of an emergency. It combines the family shelter and the dairy barn under the same roof. The dairyman can safely care for his stock.

The barn has power equipment for operating without outside help. The building has excellent overall fallout protection — a factor of 80 to 110 in the dairy barn and over 250 in the family shelter. The design of the family area reduces the radiation to less than half that for the rest of the structure.

The barn is permanently built. It will keep its strength and protective efficiency. Sand is piled 2 feet deep on the roof for overhead shielding.

40 Cows, 6 People
The barn plan is designed to shelter 40 cows and 6 people. Air is provided by multispeed ventilation fans delivering 4,000 to 16,000 cubic feet of air per minute, depending on the temperature. Standby power within the barn is desirable.

Water supply facilities are also included within the structure. The water pump, vacuum pump and standby generator can be serviced without leaving the building.

Manure, which accumulates at the rate of 3 1/4 cubic feet per day per cow, can be piled near the main door if it cannot be removed mechanically. This places the pile directly under the exhaust fan to carry away odors and fumes.

Windowless Structure
Since the barn has no windows, one watt of incandescent lighting per square foot is needed. The size of the standby generator required depends on the other demands.

Gasoline is stored in an underground tank outside the utility room. Exhaust fumes from the standby generator motor and air from the compressor are vented to the outside.

The main door of this design is 6 feet wide and admits 30 percent of the radiation passing to the center of the dairy barn. Baled hay stacked in a pile 6 feet wide against the door and soaked with water reduces the radiation passing through the blocked door to only 1/43 of the radiation passing through the normal door. The blocked door admits only 1 percent of the radiation passing to the center of the dairy barn. Stack-

Illinois Farm Remains Perilous To Safety

Constant efforts are being made to get farm folks to work and live safely. Yet across the nation, accidents continue to kill 8,700 and injure 800,000 farm residents yearly.

The dollar cost? $1.5 billion. Farm folks just can't afford this loss.

National Farm Safety Week is a major nationwide cooperative drive to help focus attention on the lurking dangers that surround farm residents. The safety drive is spearheaded by the National Safety Council and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, along with state safety councils and thousands of local workers.

Laws and regulations help to some extent, but the main responsibility for preventing serious farm accidents must be placed on the individual, emphasizes O. L. Hogsett, extension safety specialist, University of Illinois College of Agriculture.

Modern farmers' tools of production involve machines, electricity and chemicals. Hogsett urges farmers, "Don't get so familiar with these modern helpers that you grow careless about operating and using them safely."

It's important to take the fear out of farming by practicing safety throughout the year rather than splurging in July and then ignoring the dangers the rest of the year, the safety specialist concludes.

Illinois And United Grain Co-Ops Merge

Merger of the Illinois Grain Corporation of Chicago and the United Grain Company of Champaign has been approved by stockholders of the two co-operatives, it was announced in Bloomington Thursday.

Merger of the two companies, completed in stockholder meetings July 21 and 22, is seen as a method of increasing the efficiency of grain marketing and further improving the income of farmers' marketing through the merged company.

Directors of the two co-operatives will serve as the board of directors of the merged company, to be known as the Illinois Grain Corporation. An organization meeting of the new cooperative board will be held July 31 in Chicago at which time officers will be elected.

Economic projections indicate substantial advantages will result from the merger by reason of elimination of duplicating expenses and by better use of facilities owned by both companies.

Six River Elevators
Illinois Grain Corporation, a farmer-owned farmer-controlled affiliate of the Illinois Agricultural association, owns and operates six terminal elevators on the Illinois and Mississippi rivers. It also has terminal elevators in Decatur, Alabama, and Tampa, Florida, and it operates the 6 1/2-million-bushel Gateway Elevator on Calumet Harbor at the Port of Chicago. Illinois Grain maintains submerchandising offices at Decatur and St. Louis; is the major investor in the St. Louis Grain Corporation which operates a 2 1/4-million-bushel terminal elevator at St. Louis; maintains a subsidiary — Illinois Cooperative Futures — which deals in the sale of grain futures; and is one of the owners of Producers' Export Company, a New York firm handling export grain sales. Illinois Grain's member elevators serve most of the rural areas of Illinois.

Economies Anticipated
United Grain Company is also farmer-owned and farmer-controlled. Its operation is concentrated in Central and Northern Illinois. With main offices at Champaign, United carries on merchandising activities in Peoria, Chicago, and Decatur and operates a 1 1/2-million-bushel terminal elevator at Creve Coeur, Ill., just below Peoria on the Illinois River plus an elevator at Bourbon in Douglas County.

By putting the facilities of the two companies together, every major grain marketing area in Illinois can be served more efficiently, the officers feel. Formerly, Illinois Grain and United Grain had about 80 member elevators in common. With the merger, the new company will serve about 250 member elevators.

Improved Pastures Meeting In Cass

VIRGINIA — There are 116 farms in Cass county which are showing steady progress in preparation of establishing improved pastures. Bulldozers are busy clearing brush, shaping gullies and preparing the seed bed. All this is a part of the $150,000 pasture program now going on in Cass county.

A special A.C.P. project is providing $100,000 federal funds and local farmers will provide the balance.

R. D. Meridith, farm adviser, announces a pasture demonstration and field day will be held on the Carlos Kruse farm on Tuesday, July 28, at 1:30 p.m. Bill Pardee, University of Illinois Extension specialist, along with S.C.S. and A.S.C.S. will go over techniques in seeding, fertilizing and management.

Prayer Poem

God Blesses All Of Us

By Mary Pence Claywell

Over the valleys and mountains tall,
The sunshine down upon us all,
Warming the earth on a chilly morn,
Making greener the fields of corn,
Chasing the darkness of the night,
Flooding the earth with golden light,
The clouds drift by, or gather at will,
Over the same bright valleys and hills,
Over the mountains, the fertile plains,
Spilling at length, the welcome rains,
When the fields are dry, and the streams are low,
Watering the earth, to make things grow,
The trees are laden with fruit, so rare,
Luscious sweetness, for all to share,
With arms outstretched, for all to share,
Offering their shade to every man,
And the breezes blow with gentle call,
Bringing relief . . . to one and all,
Thank Thee, Lord, Thou Merciful One,
For the fruitful valleys, and rain, and sun,
For the many Blessings, that gently fall,
And THY SHELTERING WING . . . that COVERS ALL

Pie For Boys

By Mrs. Otto Dorr

So High.

Part 2

By the next week Mart had thought of a new game, "We could measure our pieces of pie with a fork," he began. "One piece might be a little higher than another," adding quickly, "But our fingers would not touch them," for his mother's bright knife had stopped cutting. "Well," she agreed after a pause, "But no fingers."

There was hardly more than a smidgen's difference, but through the summer's apple pies, black berry pies, peach pies or lemon pies all were gauged on forks waved overhead with a finger pointing to the high point. Then school began again with three new dinner buckets for three little brothers and Eric with Mart going off to High School in town.

Side by side they sat at the school cafeteria for on pie day the game began once more. Here pieces were not quite as evenly cut as at home, measurements were not so close. Something new now happened too, for Eric and Mart were members of the High School Chorus and practicing for a cantata. Costumes must be put together, a hat with a long feather, a cape and a sword for Eric who would sing the part of a prince lost in the forest; a brown leather tunic and pointed cap for Mart whose bright sash must hold a hunting knife, he would be King of a Gypsy Band.

One day their Director announced "From now on we must practice in the evening with stage lights and woodland scenery." Eric seemed troubled. "I can never get back for seven o'clock rehearsal," he told Mart, "My chores won't be done." "Get your brothers to help," Mart advised. "They have their own work to do," Eric answered his friend.

"Ride one of your father's horses," but Eric knew his father's rules. "Horses work in the field all day, they have to eat and sleep at night." Solved Problem. Mart would not give up. "I can ride Jinks; I'll come by for you. He will carry double." Eric's worries vanished; minutes before seven o'clock the boys tied Jinks to the hitching rack and hurried in to rehearsal on time.

Through open windows Cantata music floated over Jink's drowsy brown ears; later quick footsteps sounded and familiar hands unknotted the bridle reins. Through lighted city streets then into dark country roads the three travelers home contentedly. "Some day I want to be a Music Director," Eric had decided, "I still want to sing," Mart admitted but I would choose to study agriculture." Only in vacation time the boys saw one another now.

Time Flies By

Years and years later they both came to a class anniversary dinner. At desert time there appeared a new kind of pie, towering pink fruited wedges stood before each diner, Strawberry Chiffon Pie! Eric's eyes grew wide, he must measure this! Higher than the times of his fork it reached upward. He looked across at Mark admiring his mountain of pink chiffon.

Eric's fork flashed in the air, "So high, so high!" he signaled in front of dignified and proper guests who sat astonished. "What next?" their eyes said. Mart looked up silently but his eyes twinkled in remembrance of the old game. Too late Eric recalled that waving a fork overhead was nearly as ill mannered as sticking a finger into pie crust, so he told the story of that coconut pie wedge centered with a gaping hole his finger had marked long ago, and how his mother had considered that school-boy measurements were preferable to a sticky finger planted through her perfect crust.

BEAUTIFUL SEASON

Summer is a beautiful season. Sometimes it is hot and sometimes cool. But still summer is beautiful. Beautiful summer, Beautiful summer.

If it wasn't so hot. It would be like Spring. If it wasn't so hot. People wouldn't know if it's Spring or Summer. Summer is so much fun. You can go fishing and go swimming. It is a wonderful season. But still it is so hot sometimes. Don Carol Woods 6th grade Mrs. Stewart Washington School

FAVORITE SEASON

Summertime is my favorite season. Time to go swimming, and time to go skiing. Fun and games need no reason. Lessons in art, tennis and golf. Baseball games for boys. And library books to enjoy. Fill summer days almost enough.

No more homework, science or math. Hurray, we're glad when school is out. At last we are free to run about. At August's end, we're glad that school again begins.

Rockets And Space—

ARMING THE SATURN V

By WALTER B. HENDRICKSON JR.

SATURN V ON THE PAD

The Saturn V is assembled and checked out for launching in a huge Vertical Assembly Building (VAB). It is then carried upright to the launch pad along with its Launcher Umbilical Tower (LUT) by a giant caterpillar-treaded Crawler-Transporter.

After placing the Saturn V and the LUT on the launch pad the crawler leaves to pick up the 414-foot-high Arming Tower. This gantry-like structure is parked beside the crawlerway (the path over which the crawler travels) about halfway between the pad and the VAB.

Workmen Like Ants

While the crawler is fetching the Arming Tower, workmen swarm around the launch pad like ants over an ant hill. Some of them begin to move a 85-foot-long, 55 foot-wide and 49 foot high welded steel blast deflector along rails to position it under the Saturn V. This giant structure resembles two halves of a highway bridge arch back to back.

Other men connect the LUT to the 2-story underground Terminal Connecting Room west of the pad. This 60 by 100 foot structure holds all the connections between the pad, the LUT and the Launch Control Center (LCC).

The LCC is a 360 by 150 foot, 3-story office building beside the VAB to which it is connected. From here the firing of the Saturn V will be controlled.

Soon the crawler transporter arrives and places the Arming Tower on four piers on the side of the Saturn V opposite the Umbilical Tower. Five covered platforms now close around the rocket like clamps.

Flashing Red Light

When the Arming Tower is in place, a truck with a flashing red light rolls up beside the tower. On the sides of the truck, in big, day-glow orange letters is the word—"Explosives."

This truck has brought the retro rocket that will slow the Saturn V's spent stages, and the explosives to separate these stages. Also on the truck are the destruct charges which would blow the rocket up if it drifts off course.

The smaller explosives are brought up to their places in the three elevators of the arming tower while the larger ones are swung up by the 75-ton crane atop the tower.

Its main purpose now served, the Arming Tower is kept at the pad until the time for fueling the rocket to aid in checking out the Saturn V.

For Short-Wave Listener

Simple Antenna, Tuner

By Joseph A. Smith

Now that your antenna and ground systems are installed and working, you will noticeably improve your antenna pickup by building up this simple antenna tuner.

While the simple system here is designed to tune the frequency range of from approximately 3,000 kilocycles up through 10,000 kilocycles (thus covering both the 3.5 to 4 and 7.0 to 7.3 megacycles slightly to permit loading the antenna to some other range of frequencies. (Assuming another form of antenna.)

Add a few turns and it tunes lower; take off a few turns and it tunes higher. It's as simple as that.

Our little tuner, diagramed here, may be used to either parallel or series tune our antenna as our situation might require. When loading or tuning our 125 foot Windom antenna, we will place SW1 in "Parallel" switch position, and tune for maximum incoming signal strength.

When tuning your antenna you will find that the variable capacitor rotatable plates, when tuning the 40 meter 7mcs band for example, are approximately 80% out of mesh; on the other hand, when tuning the 80-75 band said plates are about 85% in mesh. In this manner, you can check to see whether or not your system is working properly.

Just For Short Wave?

Prize Watermelon

By John Rankin

It was a Saturday afternoon in late summer when ten year old Billy Todd helped Gramps carry the supplies from the store out to the pickup truck.

Smoke curled up from Gramps' corn cob pipe as he surveyed the items. "Guess that's about everything," he muttered. "Salt for the cows, flour, sugar, a roll of wire, smoking tobacco and Grandma's thread. Pile in, Son, it's time to head for home."

The freckled-faced youngster had turned to admire a display of watermelons in front of the store. "Hey, Gramps, those are really keen looking. I'll bet Grandma would sort of like to have one, maybe."

Gramps grinned. "Hop in the truck if you want a watermelon, young feller. We'll go by Sam Potter's place on the way home."

Gramps slowed the truck as he left the main highway and headed down the winding and makeshift road. "It's a mile or so back to Sam's place," he said, "but he raises the finest watermelons to be found in these parts—real fresh too."

An Oddball? Billy looked at Gramps with an amused grin. "Grandma thinks Mr. Potter is some sort of oddball. She says he'd have to be to live back here in the hills alone and everything."

"He acts a bit strange at times," Gramps nodded. "Even when we were growing up together he was different from most kids. Sam is a crafty one though—but he's not a bad sort when folks understand him."

A tall, gangling and barefooted man came to the door as Gramps pulled up to the dilapidated and weather-beaten house. He wore a slouched hat and a grayish shaggy beard matched the mop of graying hair that hung to his shoulders. Gramps grinned at the old timer. "Drag your worthless old hide out here, Sam, before the boy makes off with half your watermelons."

An amused light showed in the old man's eyes as he returned Gramps' grin. "Guess the boy must be a chip off the old block eh, Ben Todd?" he shot back. Then he ambled out and climbed into the truck with Gramps and Billy.

Real Big Melon At the patch Gramps had selected several watermelons when Billy stopped to eye an especially large one near the fence.

"Gee, Gramps, this is a real beaut. Why don't we buy it from Mr. Potter, maybe?"

Sam Potter turned to glare at Billy suspiciously. "Money can't buy that one, kid," he bristled, "that's my prize melon of the whole patch! I'm saving it for seed!"

Billy's eyes brightened. "It's a real dandy all right. But ain't you afraid some guys might slip in some night and make off with it or something?"

"Just let them try it," the gangling backwoodsman challenged. "I keep a shotgun handy . . . and the kid that tries to swipe one of my watermelons ends up with a load of buckshot!"

Amazing Home Run Bat

By Ann Rigg

Amos, though a rather unpleasant man, is an ardent fan of the home team which has not been doing well. He sees a chance to aid the team and make some money for himself by selling them a bat he has made with an electric device that repels baseballs. This works fine—except that Pinky fails to pay for the wonderful bat.

As I said before, the day of the playoff game is here. Dudley Stadium was packed, to say the least. People were sitting on each other's laps. There was no room to walk, for people were sitting on the steps and in aisles. Oh! Now how did I get on this subject when I'm supposed to be telling a story?

Anyway, the game began promptly at 1:00 p.m. The first inning lasted exactly one hour and one minute. The score was 22-19 in favor of the Duds. (You must remember that the Duds are terrible pitchers and fielders.)

The game wore on. The ninth finally arrived. It was 10:30. The score was 51-50. The crowd was tense. Though the Duds had a lead, it was very slim. In the Dogood half of the inning, all the Duds were concentrating so hard that no one was in the dugout.

Amos Tricks Pinky Then, Amos saw his chance. He got up and stepped over people to get to the entrance of the Duds locker room. As he passed through, Amos picked up the largest bat on the rack of old bats. He found a can of black paint and painted a small button on the handle. Then he slipped outside to the dugout.

Amos tiptoed across to the bat rack. There he quickly exchanged the old bat for the wonderful one. Then he took HIS bat (Pinky hadn't paid for it) out with him and went home.

Well, I guess you know the rest. I won't mention the score. After the game Pinky was picked up by the police and was taken to the league president. Pinky was fined $100,000 and kicked out of the league.

Do you know the moral of this story? Pinky learned it—the hard way. If you can't win by playing fair, you'd be better off in the end by not playing at all.

THE END

WIND BLOWS FREE

Summer is fun. Summer is cool. If you don't like it You are a fool. You walk outside, and there you are! Because you can see, So far, so far. The wind blows free, for the world around. It blows at your hat so you hold it down. Yes summer is great. Great for us all. You know, and I know It's better than Fall.

Africa's Leaders Snub Tshombe

EDITOR'S NOTE — Veteran AP correspondent Lynn Heinzel won the 1961 Pulitzer Prize for pioneer reporting of the Congo crisis. Now chief of AP's African operations, he attended the African summit conference in Cairo this week.

By LYNN HEINZELING
CAIRO (AP) — Africa's kings, presidents and premiers probably did nothing more significant in their five days of oratory here than their snub of Premier Moise Tshombe of the Congo.

By that single act, the African leaders who finished their summit meeting Tuesday threw their program for overthrowing the Portuguese rulers of Angola into jeopardy.

It is difficult to assess the accomplishments of the second summit meeting of the Organization of African Unity. The final communiqué was so vague that it is difficult to pinpoint anything.

The government heads were so shielded from newsmen and conference sources were so meager with real information that it was impossible to determine how deep the discussions went.

But the rejection of Tshombe was unmistakable. Prodded by President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana and President Ahmed Ben Bella of Algeria, the preparatory session of foreign ministers declared the Congolese premier's presence was undesirable. Congolese President Joseph Kasavubu boycotted the conference in retaliation.

The Congo is the seat of the revolutionary Angolan government-in-exile headed by Holden Roberto. It is a staging ground for guerrillas who have infiltrated northern Angola, the Congo's southern neighbor.

Whatever Tshombe did as leader of the Katanga secession, he has become one of the Con-go's authentic leaders, and will have to be reckoned with.

The Congo is the most strategically placed nation in Africa for any move against Angola, and the Congo does not win much by alienating its neighbor.

Only about half of Katanga's rich copper exports can be shipped abroad over the Congo's own transportation system. The rest must move through Angola and Mozambique.

Tshombe and Kasavubu cannot be enchanted by the idea of cutting out these export channels for a group of African leaders who humiliated them.

If the Congo ever succeeds in quieting its spear-throwing tribes and bringing a degree of sophistication to its belligerent politicians, it will become one of the two or three richest states in Africa. It will not have to submit to the intervention in its political life to which it has been subjected in the past.

The fact that Roberto is turning to Moscow, Prague and Peking in search of money and weapons may also have a sobering effect on the Congolese and other Africans.

The late Sidney Silodor of Philadelphia was one of the greatest players of all time. Although Sidney was noted for soundness and simplicity, he could and did use deception when necessary with deadly effect. Here is one of his greatest hands.

Sidney knew that West was not the sort of player to lead from a king against a slam contract, so Sidney went right up with dummy's ace of diamonds and dropped his queen as a false-card.

Then he led a trump to his ace and finessed the jack on the way back. This was the wrong percentage play because you don't normally finesse for the queen when you hold nine of a suit, but there was method in Sidney's play.

It happened that West held the queen, so Sidney's worries were over. He drew the last trump and went right after clubs. When the queen dropped nicely, Sidney wound up making a grand slam.

It really is unfortunate that East did not hold the queen of hearts. Now no one will ever know if East would have played the king of diamonds in the face of Sidney's earlier queen play and beaten the hand or shifted to a spade and let Sidney make the contract anyway.

Phils Bomb Cardinals 9-1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Cookie Rojas slammed a triple and two singles in support of Chris Short's six-hit pitching as the National League leading Philadelphia Phillies swept to their fourth straight victory by whipping St. Louis 9-1 Friday night. The Phillies jumped to a quick 2-0 lead in the first inning with the aid of the first of four St. Louis errors and never were headed.

With two out, Johnny Callison drew a walk off Bob Gibson, stole second and raced to third when the throw by catcher Tim McCarver went wild. Wes Covington and Cal Dalrymple then rapped run-scoring singles.

Rojas' single in the second started a two-run rally, and he drove in two runs in the sixth with a triple. In the eighth he again led off with a single and eventually scored when Julian Javier fumbled Tony Gonzalez' grounder.

Short, meanwhile, had difficulty with the Cardinals only in the third when two-out singles by Gibson, Curt Flood and Lou Brock produced the St. Louis run. The victory was Short's ninth against five losses. Gibson is 8-8.

AP Learns Grid Cards To Stay In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The Football Cardinals have ended their flirtation with Atlanta by deciding to stay in St. Louis, The Associated Press learned Friday. Bill Bidwill, Cardinal vice president, said announcement of a decision would be made this weekend. While saying no decision had been made, he told the Atlanta Journal:

"There have been some new developments which have caused us to reconsider our original position on whether or not to move to Atlanta."

Charles (Stormy) Bidwill, Bill's brother and Cardinals president, was with the team at its Lake Forest, Ill., training camp and could not be reached immediately.

However, the AP learned that the Bidwills have told Atlanta officials "St. Louis has given us everything we wanted."

They apparently referred to concessions by city and civic leaders over lease and rental terms at St. Louis' new sports stadium, now under construction, and over the city's five percent admissions tax on professional sports events.

The move left Atlanta, mistress of the South, in the mood of a maiden scorned. "The Cardinals have sold us out," said one official. "They used us as a whipping boy to get what they wanted."

New Stadiums Underway
Both cities have new sports stadiums under construction. Atlanta's 57,000-seat structure will be ready next year and the 55,000-seat downtown sports stadium in St. Louis is scheduled for completion in 1966.

The Cardinals' Atlanta romance started over lease terms at the new St. Louis stadium. They had been asked for a 30-year lease agreement and a rental equivalent to 12 per cent of the gate on home games. The city's five percent sales tax on professional sports events also was irksome to the Big Red, and they had averaged only 22,000 fans a game.

Atlanta countered with promises of greater sports patronage, a softer lease agreement and only 10 per cent of the gate as rent. No Atlanta professional sports sales tax exists.

However, spurred by newspapers and civic leaders, influential St. Louisians set out to keep the Cardinals.

City officials took another look at the St. Louis sports sales tax, and civic leaders made new offers about stadium leases and rent.

The Cardinals, oldest team in the NFL, came to St. Louis from Chicago in 1960.

Mrs. Charlene Hobbie coaches the Waverly girls' team, while her sister, Miss Mabel Hobbie, mentors the Waukegan squad and another sister, Mrs. Pat Patrick, coaches the Champaign club.

Waverly's Jean Gray was the top individual scorer of the day with a total of 16½ points. Waukegan finished with 51½ points, Champaign with 45½, Normal with 35, Waverly 29½ and Mundelein garnered 2½ points.

Killebrew Homer Ration Near Top

NEW YORK (AP) — Many power hitters have socked more home runs than Harmon Killebrew's lifetime total of 367 but only Babe Ruth hit them at a faster clip.

Not even Ted Williams, Jimmy Fox, Mel Ott or Ralph Kiner had a better ratio of home runs per time at bat. Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays and Eddie Mathews own nearly twice as many home runs, but none has hit them with as much frequency as the Minnesota Twins' strongboy.

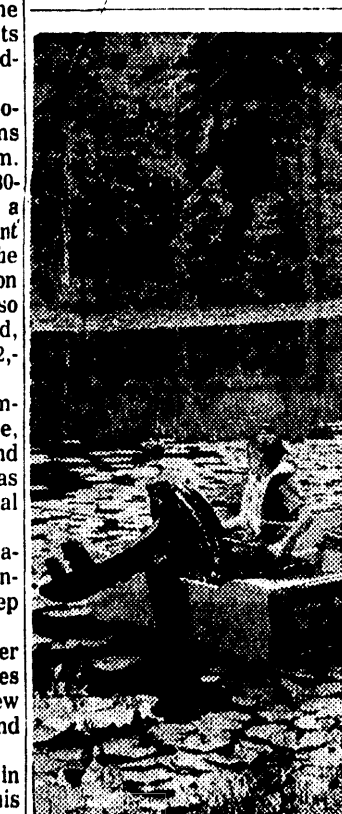

Killebrew, in his 11th season in the majors, sixth as a full time player, has whacked his 257 home runs in 3,182 official times at bat. That's a ratio of a home run every 12.4 times at bat. This is not very far behind Ruth's all-time top figure of a homer every 11.8 times at bat. In third place is Kiner, who averaged a homer every 14.1 times at bat. Mantle is fourth with 14.5. Williams is the only other with a homer under 15 times at bat. His average is 14.8.

Killebrew currently leads the majors with 34 home runs. He has had 332 official at bats. This gives him a ratio of a homer every 9.8 times at bat. Only four other players have ever gone through a season with a home ratio of one under 10 times at bat.

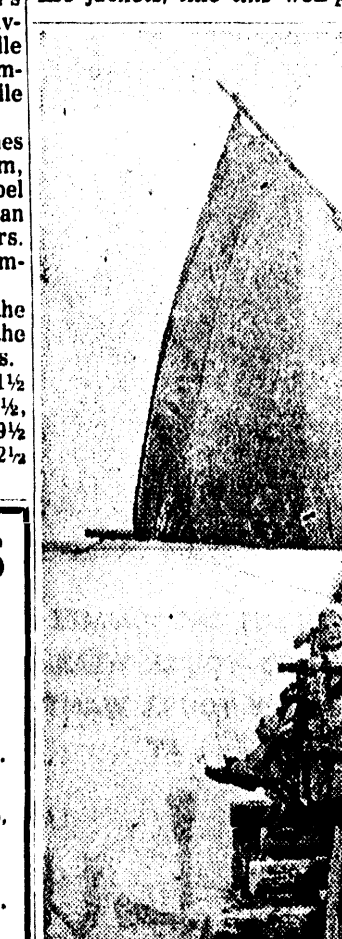

The four were Ruth who averaged a homer every nine times at bat when he slammed his record 60 in 1927; Mantle 9.5 with 54 homers in 1961; Hank Greenberg 9.6 with 58 homers in 1938; and Roger Maris 9.7 with 61 in 1961.

Orioles Leap Back Into League Lead

BALTIMORE (P) — Rookies Wally Bunker and Dave Vineyard pitched the Baltimore Orioles back into the American League lead Friday, stopping the Washington Senators 2-1 and 7-2 in a two-night doubleheader.

Bunker, only 19, hurled a five-hitter in the opener, posting his 11th victory against two defeats. The Orioles won on Bob Johnson's pinch single in the ninth. It was Johnson's 13th pinch hit in 23 attempts.

Vineyard, in his second major league start, was working on a no-hitter when he walked Chuck Hinton to open the seventh. Mike Brumley and Don Lock followed with consecutive doubles for the Senators' only hits and runs.

Except for two first inning walks, Vineyard had retired Washington in order through the sixth. He struck out seven including four straight in the fourth and fifth innings.

Vineyard, a 23-year-old right-hander, pitched his first game for Baltimore last Saturday after being recalled from Rochester.

Baltimore scored four of its second-game runs in the fourth off Steve Ridzik, making his first start after 34 relief appearances.

The remaining Oriole runs came on solo homers by Luis Aparicio, Boog Powell and Sam Bowens. It was No. 27 for Powell.

Norm Siebern homered in the third inning of the opener for Baltimore, and Washington tied it 1-1 in the seventh on Brumley's double and John Kennedy's single.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rookie Luis Tiant hurled a six-hitter Friday night and Bob Chance drove in four runs to celebrate his wedding day as the Cleveland Indians downed the Boston Red Sox 6-1.

Tiant, 23, pitched a four-hit shutout against the Yankees in his first major league start last Sunday after being called up from Portland a week ago.

Chance, who got married this afternoon, put the Indians ahead 2-1 in the fourth on a single that scored Vic Davallito and Leon Wagner. He singled home Dick Howser and Wagner in the seventh.

The Red Sox took a brief 1-0 lead in the third inning when Felix Mantilla whacked his 16th homer of the season over the left field fence.

KANSAS CITY (AP)—John O'Donoghue pitched a six-hitter and Chuck Shoemaker tripled home the game's only run in the third inning, giving Kansas City a 1-0 victory over the Los Angeles Angels Friday night.

The shutout was O'Donoghue's first in the majors as he won his duel with Don Lee, who allowed only five hits in seven innings. The victory brought O'Donoghue's record to 7-6. Lee is 5-2.

The A's scored in the third when Ed Charles beat out a hit to short and raced home on Shoemaker's triple.

Bert Campaneris, who hit two homers in a brilliant major league debut for the A's Wednesday, struck out his first two times he tried and then collected a single his final at-bat in the eighth.

As for the kids who do well, and draw applause and get their names in the paper, I don't think that's good for them, either.

Joe had only one year as a Little Leaguer, in 1948 when he was 12 years old.

"That was the first year the program came to New England," he recalled. "We had a good team that went all the way to the World Series at Williamsport, Pa., and our shortstop had his picture in Life magazine."

Ability, Interest Last

"A lot of kids must get fed up with it before they are 16 years old. They've simply had too much organization when they should be out playing on their own."

Fellow pitcher Bob Purkey not only seconds Jay's views, but adds an opinion or two of his own.

"I've got a son in Little League," Purkey volunteered, "and I'm fed up with it. It makes no sense to me to attempt to make a professional caliber athlete out of a 10-year-old boy. I don't think it's good for the boy, no matter how much the instructor knows or how well-intentioned he happens to be."

Jay concluded:
"I would be more in sympathy if they began the program at 12, instead of earlier. One more point—they say it helps combat juvenile delinquency."

"Most of your delinquency shows up at a later age. I am convinced the Little League is for adults, and that makes it a waste of time."

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Joey Jay, first Little Leaguer graduate to reach the major leagues, says he intends to discourage his son from participating in it.

The big Cincinnati Reds pitcher feels the Little League program is too ambitious with far too much parental activity and supervision.

Joey is willing to lend his voice to those child psychologists who contend Little League activity creates pressure and tensions harmful to participating youngsters. Moreover, Jay contends the Little League program is not developing players or even future baseball fans.

"I was amazed to find a couple of months ago they have what they call a Little League farm group in which my 7-year-old son, Stephan, could play," Jay said. That is far too young for organized training in something that is supposed to be fun.

"I am certainly not in sympathy with the Little League program the way it has developed," Jay contends that parental involvement, the very thing many little league supporters proclaim as the outstanding virtue of the program, is the biggest stumbling block.

All Use Pressure
"I think even the most fair-minded parents put pressure on their boys," Jay said. "I've seen a few mothers scold a boy for striking out or making an error. But even those who don't interfere find it difficult to conceal their disappointment when their kid has a bad game."

"I think they can accept the team losing, but can't adjust to a bad performance from their

Pittsfield Takes Local LL Tourney

Tom Casteel hurled a two-hitter and his teammates supplied plenty of power as Pittsfield downed Rushville 10-2 Friday night, to claim the district Little League championship at Nichols Park.

Pittsfield exploded for four runs in the third inning, on five hits including two straight home runs, two in the fifth, and wrapped it up with four more in the top of the sixth.

Casteel allowed only two hits, both by relief hurler Tom Eckray, and had a shutout going until the ninth when Rushville showed across two unearned runs.

Pittsfield scored four times in the third as Bruce Callender, Carl Galloway and Chuck Heitholt all delivered consecutive singles, two runs scoring on Heitholt's blow.

Tom McCartney followed with his third roundtripper in two games to make it 3-0. Joe Ballard made it back-to-back homers with his second of the tourney.

The winners put the game on ice with a four-run 6th on only two hits. Phil Borrowman walked, Larry Collard reached base on an error and Andy Gratton was hit by a pitch. Steve Jenkins drove in a pair with a triple and he scored on an error. Ballard singled in the final run.

Pittsfield will now advance to the Beardstown Regional week, facing the winner from the Springfield district.

O'Toole increased his record to 11-4, limiting the Pirates to singles by Bill Virdon in the first and ninth, Jim Pagnaroni in the fifth and Jerry Lynch in the seventh. Friend had his record evened at 9-9.

"I am certainly not in sympathy with the Little League program the way it has developed," Jay contends that parental involvement, the very thing many little league supporters proclaim as the outstanding virtue of the program, is the biggest stumbling block.

All Use Pressure
"I think even the most fair-minded parents put pressure on their boys," Jay said. "I've seen a few mothers scold a boy for striking out or making an error. But even those who don't interfere find it difficult to conceal their disappointment when their kid has a bad game."

"I think they can accept the team losing, but can't adjust to a bad performance from their

boy. As for the kids who do well, and draw applause and get their names in the paper, I don't think that's good for them, either.

Joe had only one year as a Little Leaguer, in 1948 when he was 12 years old.

"That was the first year the program came to New England," he recalled. "We had a good team that went all the way to the World Series at Williamsport, Pa., and our shortstop had his picture in Life magazine."

Ability, Interest Last

"A lot of kids must get fed up with it before they are 16 years old. They've simply had too much organization when they should be out playing on their own."

Fellow pitcher Bob Purkey not only seconds Jay's views, but adds an opinion or two of his own.

"I've got a son in Little League," Purkey volunteered, "and I'm fed up with it. It makes no sense to me to attempt to make a professional caliber athlete out of a 10-year-old boy. I don't think it's good for the boy, no matter how much the instructor knows or how well-intentioned he happens to be."

Jay concluded:
"I would be more in sympathy if they began the program at 12, instead of earlier. One more point—they say it helps combat juvenile delinquency."

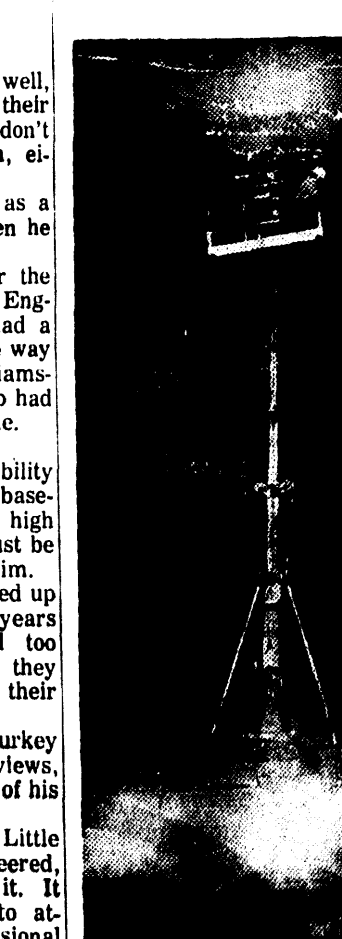

"Most of your delinquency shows up at a later age. I am convinced the Little League is for adults, and that makes it a waste of time."

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Joey Jay, first Little Leaguer graduate to reach the major leagues, says he intends to discourage his son from participating in it.

The big Cincinnati Reds pitcher feels the Little League program is too ambitious with far too much parental activity and supervision.

Joey is willing to lend his voice to those child psychologists who contend Little League activity creates pressure and tensions harmful to participating youngsters. Moreover, Jay contends the Little League program is not developing players or even future baseball fans.

The Civil War -- 100 Years Ago

THE SENSATION NOVEL — are poisoned by a young and beautiful girl. Forgeries by the last one down and it's perfectly defensible. A man marries his grandmother. Fourteen persons

Rich Man's War; Poor Man's Fight

Soldiers, newspaper reporters and later historians called the Civil War a rich man's war and a poor man's fight.

Aging probate records in the Morgan County court house support this statement. Anybody with any money or means stayed home and made more money than they ever dreamed about, as the income tax returns clearly indicate.

At the start of the war many men enlisted simply because they were jobless. The soldier's pay of $13 a month looked mighty good to a man with no hopes of employment. The world-wide depression which followed the Crimean war had squeezed this area for three hard years.

Many of our boys who were killed during the war, or died from battle wounds and disease, left no estates of any kind. Their back pay and the enlistment bounties due them were sent to their next of kin, and that was that, the matter was closed.

Slender Holdings

Those estates which went through probate court were so skinny, so thin, that it is almost unbelievable.

Thomas B. Woolf, a Concord attorney, became the captain of Co. B, 101st Illinois Infantry. It appears that he was by far the most popular officer in the entire regiment, and our boys mourned deeply when he was killed at the battle of Peach Tree Creek, just north of Atlanta, Ga., the afternoon of July 20, 1864.

Woolf was 35 years old, a native of Westmoreland, England, who migrated to the United States with his parents when he was very young. He was the father of four small children, Valeria, Thomas, William and George, when he enlisted in the army in 1862.

Lawyer With No Will

Attorney Woolf left no will, but County Judge Sidney S. Duncan took a personal interest in the affair and closed the estate in rapid-order style. On Sept. 19, 1864, he appointed the widow, Lavinia J., administrator. As appraisers he named three close friends in Concord precinct: John E. Bayless, Ezekiah Bridgman and Daniel Deitrick.

They were undoubtedly coached by Judge Duncan, for in every instance they leaned over backwards in favor of the widow.

The real estate estimate found that Woolf owned a lot in the town of Concord worth $80 and five acres of timber land worth $100. It so happened that Dr. J. L. Thorndyke held Woolf's note for $80, so he took the vacant lot. It also happened that Woolf owed $100 to the school district, so the directors squared up things by taking the timber acreage.

Not Much Furniture

The appraisers found the household goods were worth $194: Parlor stove, $10; book case, $12; cupboard, $5; stands, $4; cooking stove, $20; chairs and table, $3; bedsteads and bedding, $40; law books, $100.

Early in September the federal government paid Capt. Woolf's estate what it owed in back pay and enlistment bounty, a total of $300 in cash.

The appraisers found that in accordance with the law of Feb. 11, 1847, Mrs. Woolf was entitled to a widow's dower of $636, which couldn't be touched by any creditor.

Aid For Widow

This law stipulated that each widow in Illinois was entitled to keep a horse worth $40, a woman's side saddle, $15; beds and bedding, $100, necessary household and kitchen furnishings, $100; spinning wheel, $5; one loom with appendages, $15; pair of cards, $1; stove with necessary pipe therefor, $30; one milk cow and calf for each four members of the family, $35; two sheep and fleeces for each member of the family, $40; provisions for family for one year, $120; feed for livestock for six months, $50; fuel for three months, $25.

Apparently her creditors in Concord got together and agreed not to pester her with small accounts; at least there is no indication in the records that they submitted claims of any kind against the estate.

But it is just as well that they didn't, because they couldn't collect a cent.

Judge Duncan closed the estate Jan. 11, 1865, accepting the appraisers' report in full.

The captain's widow and her four children didn't have much money — but they had plenty of friends in Concord precinct.

—Cecil Tendick

From the Jacksonville Journal:

A BRUTAL MURDER — A young man, by the name of James Burns, living near Franklin in this county, was brutally murdered on last Sunday evening, while returning home from church, and when within three-quarters of a mile from his father's house. He was shot from his horse, receiving two wounds, either of which would have been fatal. Young Burns was quiet, inoffensive and highly respected by his neighbors. No reasons were assigned, and no persons suspected, for the murder, at least none of sufficient weight to justify a well grown suspicion.

MARRIED — By Chaplain W. J. Rutledge, on the 26th, inst., Lieut. Alfred J. Worcester of the 14th Ill. Infantry, to Miss Lana E. McCollister, both of White Hall. We heartily congratulate the Lieutenant on his second promotion, as his first was gained for meritorious conduct at Shiloh.

(Cake received.)

NEW ORGAN — The Congregational Church have purchased a fine new organ for their house, which we understand, will be completed and arrive here from Utica, N.Y., in a short time. We will give a description of this fine instrument after it arrives.

BUTTER — Seems to be an article of rare curiosity to our citizens, seeing the crowds that gather around the lucky farmer who chances to bring a pound to market. Forty to fifty cents a sight is not an unreasonable charge, considering high prices in general.

From the Jacksonville Sentinel:
JACKSONVILLE MARKET — Grain dealers were paying for spring wheat $1.50; winter wheat, $1.75; rye, $1; corn 95 cents to $1 - 70 pounds to the bushel; oats 55 cents.

THE BIG SHOW — Lent's equestrianism on last Saturday drew an immense crowd, and in the evening also, the large pavilion was filled to overflowing.

We notice that the buildings have already been removed from the new jail lot, preparatory to the erection of the splendid new County Boarding House, to be conducted under the able supervision of our old friend, Capt. Hunt.

Capt. Cornelius Hook, Jr., of the U.S. Army, formerly of Jacksonville, Ill., died at Key West, Florida, on the 19th of June, of yellow fever. The Cap-

We are assured by reliable authority that on yesterday the President of the United States so far demeaned himself and disgraced his exalted position as to invite a negro servant to ride with him in his own carriage from the Capitol to the President's house. Comment is unnecessary.

From the Carrollton Gazette: — Wm. C. Rainey, we believe, contemplates erecting a large ware house at the railroad, in this place.

The store room owned by J. M. Davis, on the north side of the square, is being very handsomely arranged and fitted up, and is to be occupied by J. M. Davis and S. A. Vedder as a drug store.

The Board of Enrollment for this District, have just closed their session of three days, in Jerseyville, and have returned to Jacksonville. During the session there were four hundred and fifty applications for exemption, only about one hundred and thirty, however, were received. They hold their session next week in Carlinville.

Is your iron a slow poke? Maybe it's time for a wiring check-up

In older homes (and some not so very old!) lazy electric appliances often act that way because the wiring does not supply adequate power.

Find out if this is the case in your home—especially when you can do so without spending a penny!

Ask your electric contractor to check your house wiring against modern standards for electric convenience and ample capacity, today and in the future.

Or ask Illinois Power for a wiring check-up. If your home meets modern standards, you'll receive the 100 Amp Reddy Living Award—proof of better living ... electrically.

THE BELLYLAF

By Esther Lacy

The foreman hurried over to my workbench and told me, "Jack, go right home. The police just called, your house has been robbed!"

"What? Was Carla there? Did anything happen to her?" "Well," the foreman hesitated, "Jack, your wife's unconscious but the police said there's nothing to worry about, she's..."

I dashed out of the plant still wearing my work apron, kept the gas pedal on the floor and six minutes later skidded into the driveway of our new home. We'd returned from our honeymoon last week and I had nightmare visions of my darling Carla battered and bruised. Carla, my child-bride!

There was a police car in the driveway and as I dashed into the house a burly man, obviously a detective, stopped me and asked, "You her husband?"

"Yes. Where's my wife?" "Relax, she's okay. On the couch."

There indeed was my Carla, sleeping like an angel, looking cute in her new house dress, her pretty face in repose, seemed younger than her 18 years. There wasn't a mark on her, she looked as if she'd merely stretched out for an afternoon nap. But the house was in rough shape, drawers ransacked, books knocked off their shelves. I shook Carla but the detective said, "Leave her alone, she took a couple of sleep pills."

"My Carla doesn't need sleep pills, why she once dozed off as we were waiting in line to get into a movie. What happened here?"

"About 25 minutes ago a neighbor across the street noticed a man leaving your place with a suitcase, thought he was acting suspicious and phoned us. We have an alert out for him now, a petty thief who's worked this racket in other towns. This is the first time we..."

"What racket?" I cut in, realizing with a sickening feeling that the silver pitcher, the radio clock, and most of our other wedding gifts were gone.

"This punk is well dressed and has a glib tongue. He rings the bell and when the woman of the house answers he claims he represents a vitamin company which is placing a new pill on the market. He asks her to try a few, and if she feels full of pep in a minute, why he'll give her a whole box, and so on, all for free. He says his company is trying to build by word of mouth advertising. Few people can resist anything free. He gives her one, her maid and kids also get samples, if she's not alone. Actually the tablets are sleeping pills and while the housewife is dozing, he takes his time going through the place."

"How long does this sleep pill last?" "Naturally the loss of the wedding gifts had shaken me, but I was young enough to replace these. I was most concerned about Carla, and whether these pills would have any permanent effects.

"Your wife should awake in about a half hour. In the meantime give us a list of all missing articles. We'll start checking the pawn shops. We're watching the bus and railway stations, the roads, know from out-of-town police what this guy looks like."

I sat down in our new modern chair, my head spinning. I was dazed, upset, and mostly relieved that my lovely Carla was safe.

The detective said, "This joker is a cool one. Your wife must have just baked an apple pie and..."

"Carla baked an apple pie? The darling was going to surprise me! I'm nuts about apple pies."

"It's on the kitchen table, still warm. Your wife must be a good cook because before he left this punk sat down and ate half the pie, with a cup of coffee. Taking prints from the cup now, and..."

"A half a pie? That's impossible. Why the man would need an iron..." I jumped to my feet. "Officer, we have him trapped! Simply alert all doctors and hospitals to be on the watch for him!"

The detective's thick face looked puzzled. "What for, the guy hasn't been shot."

"Officer, my wife is a wonderful girl and she's trying hard, but the fact remains she can't boil water! If this guy ate much of her pie he's going to be very sick within a few minutes. I know!"

The detective nodded and as he started for the phone his face turned slightly pale. That figured; for no man alive could have eaten a whole half of anything my Carla baked!

Wants Driving Restrictions On Youths Under 18

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — State Rep. Paul Powell of Vienna announced today he will seek legislation in the 1965 General Assembly for restrictions upon driving privileges of youths under 18.

Powell, Democratic nominee for secretary of state, said one of his proposals would provide that no one under 18 may obtain a driver's license unless he has successfully completed a driver education course approved by the secretary of state.

He said he will propose that applicants under 21 must obtain parental consent prior to the issuance of a driver's license. The present law requires parental consent only for drivers under 18.

Another proposal, Powell said, would require that a license be suspended for at least 60 days for motorists under 21 who are convicted of a two moving traffic violations within a 12-month period.

Powell said the legislation is needed to "stop the rising tide of deaths resulting from motor vehicle accidents involving minors."

Youth Falls To Death From Seat Of Tractor

JERSEYVILLE — The body of Paul Thomas Johnson, sixteen year old son of Paul E. and Doris Leyland Johnson of Medora route one was moved from the Jacoby Brothers Funeral Home in Jerseyville Saturday afternoon to the Mehl Funeral Home in Carrollton for funeral arrangements.

The boy was killed in a farm accident Saturday morning on the John Flautt farm in Ruyle Township. Prior to the accident, the youth was operating a tractor along a roadway of the farm and pulling a corn shredder behind the tractor.

The tractor struck a metal roller along the roadway which jostled the driver from the seat. The youth fell in the path of the shredder which passed over his body. The tractor pulling the equipment continued along the roadway for some distance and finally made a turn and proceeded nearly a half of a quarter mile until it became stalled in a deep ditch.

The father of the youth sensing that something was wrong went to look for the boy and found his body on the roadway. Coroner Rodney Jacoby and Chief Deputy Sheriff Hargiss Maholland went to the Flautt farm, and the body of the youth was brought to the Jacoby Brothers Funeral Home in this city. An inquest will be conducted at a later date by Coroner Jacoby.

Friends may call at the funeral home in Carrollton at any time.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the funeral home with Rev. Raleigh Gordon of Greenfield officiating. Interment will be in Carrollton City cemetery.
